Debt 'Token' Door Is Kept Open Despite Johnson Act

Payments on June 15 May Avert Penalty, President Hints.

Evidence of Good Faith Is Desired

Ban on Securities Sale Not to Be Applied Arbitrarily.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

A slim gleam of light was cast over the muddled war debts situation by President Roosevelt yesterday with an inference the door is still open to "token" payments on June 15 despite passage of the Johnson act.

By this he is believed to mean that foreign countries which come forward and renew evidence of good faith, pending future negotiations for debt settlements, may escape the stigma of "default" and continue to enjoy assistance from American credit markets.

This construction of the Johnson act—which differs widely from earlier versions, including that of Senator Hiram Johnson himself—follows closely the line of reasoning in the opinion given Secretary of State Hull by Attorney General Cummings last week.

In reply to a barrage of questions yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt said only that the policy of this Government remains the same, that he had not considered the token-paying nations in default, and that, finally, in future such payments would be considered separately and on their own merits.

Broad Construction.

This exploded the notion that the Johnson act, which prohibits sale in this country of securities of foreign governments or political subdivisions in default, would apply arbitrarily to all countries who still owe substantial portions of their debt now past due.

Although the Johnson act refers to any nation "in default in the payment of its obligations, or any part thereof," Mr. Cummings construed the intent of the word "default" in a broad sense. He attached "great significance" to the fact that Mr. Roosevelt, who signed the act, had publicly stated he did not consider Great Britain in default.

This disposed of the present question of Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Latvia and Lithuania, who made "token" payments before passage of the Johnson act. The exact status of countries which tender such payments in the future, however, is still a ticklish point the Administration has not yet cleared up.

In light of the President's remarks at his press conference, and a sentence from the Cummings ruling, however, it was believed a means has been found to accept further

12 in Congress Win in Indiana

All Democratic Incumbents Including Mrs. Jenckes, Renominated.

Indianapolis, May 9 (AP).—Counting of the votes cast for an unprecedented number of candidates—more than 36,000 all told—proceeded slowly today following yesterday's primary election in Indiana.

The returns available showed the renomination without exception of the 12 Democrats now in Congress, among them Mrs. Virginia Jenckes, of Terre Haute.

Republican Congressional nominees included several former members of the House. One was Representative Fred S. Purnell, of Attica, defeated in the last general election by Mrs. Jenckes.

The count was so slow no conclusive returns were available showing the outcome of a factional fight within the Democratic party for control of the State convention in June. This fight brought into conflict Gov. Paul V. McNutt and R. Earl Peters, former State chairman and now aspirant for the Senatorial nomination.

Six Lost in Crash Of French Airliner

Ship, Flying in Fog, Dives Into Channel.

Le Bourget, France, May 9 (AP).—A London-bound French airliner, flying in a heavy fog and carrying three passengers and a crew of three, crashed into the English Channel 18 miles off shore today.

All hands apparently were lost. Wreckage of the liner, owned by Air France, was seen on the channel by airplane searchers sent out from Croydon Air Field.

The passengers were Count Ernest de Neuville, French nobleman; M. Guichard, Frenchman, and M. Franssard, of Geneva.

The crew consisted of a French pilot named Cannet, Radio Operator Olier, also French, and Steward Hudson, an Englishman.

Insull Says He Fled To Escape Assassins

The iron doors of the Cook County jail opening for the entrance of Samuel Insull, one-time millionaire. Insull, brought back from Turkey, was unable to raise bond of $200,000 demanded on a charge of using the mails to defraud. Efforts are under way to have the bail amount lowered.

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Samuel Insull's attorney shoved hard on the jail door today and won the deposed utilities king a new chance for freedom.

Meanwhile, the Herald and Examiner, in a copyrighted story, quoted Insull as saying that he fled America because he feared assassins.

"If anyone says I stayed away to protect someone other than myself," the paper quoted him, "just tell him it's a lie. There were three reasons why I got out of Chicago when I did, and why I resisted the attempt to bring me back.

"In the first place, my family was alarmed lest I should be killed. Under conditions such as prevailed at

Pedestrians Lead Traffic Casualty List

Walkers' Inattention Held to Blame for Many Accidents.

By Felix Bruner.

Seventy per cent of the persons killed in traffic accidents in Washington during the last three years have been pedestrians. Of those injured, 49 per cent have been pedestrians.

Of the 13 persons killed last month, 8 were pedestrians. Of the 635 injured, 157 were pedestrians.

Traffic rules in Washington are designed to move the abnormally heavy traffic with the greatest practical expedition. The pedestrian crosses the streets as and if he can.

In hundreds of accidents involving pedestrians the victims have been crossing streets in the middle of blocks or elsewhere than on crosswalks.

Of the 196 pedestrians killed during the last three years 76 were killed attempting to cross streets not at crosswalks and 12 were killed after stepping out from behind parked cars.

In the same period 1,354 persons who attempted to cross streets at points other than at crosswalks were injured.

Serious Pedestrian Problem.

"We are told," William A. Van Duzer, traffic commissioner said yesterday, "that in Washington our problem should be simpler than in Fort Chipewayan, Alta., May 9 (AP).—Sweeping away buildings and trees, the waters of Peace River reached 80 feet above normal level today, the highest in the memory of white men or Indians.

Jobless Stab Police, Halt Relief Work

500 Protest Low Pay, Force Workers From Kansas Jobs.

Wichita, Kans., May 9 (AP).—Five hundred men, protesting against wage scales in work relief here, marched on several projects late today, forced the workers to lay down their tools, and beat and stabbed policemen who sought to intercept them.

The men, representing themselves to be unemployed except for relief activities, finally were dispersed after an hour's demonstration. Streams of water were showered upon them by firemen.

John Wood, Sedgwick County attorney, said James "Whitey" McLean, reputed leader of the group, probably would be charged with criminal syndicalism.

Approximately 3,000 men voted in a mass meeting last night to strike today unless demands for increased working hours on relief projects were met. They protested the work schedules of one day a week for single men, upward to four days for married men with large families were inadequate.

Nearly half the workers reported for duty today, however, and authorities considered the situation had quieted. Nevertheless, police

Young Wife Kills Self to End Free Love Triangle for Mate

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—A young wife, dead by her own hand, supplied the answer tonight to a question two young couples whose love lives were enmeshed had asked themselves: "How will it all end?"

The husband of the dead woman and the other couple told a coroner's jury of the events which they believed caused Mrs. Etna Hamm, 25, to fire a bullet into her head last night.

The widower, Kenneth A. Hamm, 26, who studies journalism evenings at Northwestern University, said he and his wife had often discussed his free love theories and his friendship with Mrs. Allie Nelson, 25, wife of a friend.

Yesterday Mrs. Hamm returned to her apartment and found Kenneth and Mrs. Nelson together. She offered to leave, but they told her they would go.

"We drove for a couple of hours in Jackson Park," said Hamm. "We discussed what would become of all of us. We asked ourselves, 'How is it going to end?'"

Mrs. Nelson repeated Hamm's story.

Then Nelson, in a subdued voice, disclosed that Hamm's affection for Mrs. Nelson had been no secret to him.

"I've know the Hamms for five years, ever since we met at a reunion of the alumni of the college we all attended at Chillicothe, Mo. I first knew of it a month ago when he told me Allie would come to him when he said the word. I didn't believe it. We never talked about it since, but I have gone through tortures wondering 'how is it going to end?'"

Nelson said Hamm was a romantic character trying to live the short stories he wrote, unable to distinguish between facts and imagination. Hamm, he said, was interested in psychology and often talked about free love, but Nelson thought it was a lot of "bosh."

His arm around his slight wife, Nelson declared:

"I have always loved my wife. I love her now. I always will."

The jury, in routine fashion, wrote:

Armed Cars Speed Leas Off to Prison

'Maker of Governors' to Serve 6-10 Years for Bank Fraud.

Son Gets Shorter Term in $17,000,000 Collapse.

Nashville, Tenn., May 9 (AP).—The trail that led Luke Lea to the United States Senate when he was 31, thence to a World War colonelcy and decoration and later to a dominant position in Tennessee politics, turned abruptly today toward a North Carolina prison, a three-year fight for freedom lost.

Once wielding such tremendous political power that he was kown as "maker of governors," the 55-year-old former newspaper publisher and his oldest son, Luke Lea, jr., were placed in automobiles which bristled with machine guns and rifles and were hurried by a secret route to Raleigh, N. C., where penalties imposed for bank law violations awaited them.

Following them was their chief counsel, L. E. Gwinn, who was reported planning to seek their release on habeas corpus writs.

Lea, sr., is under a sentence of six to ten years. His son has the alternative of paying $25,000 in fines and costs or serving two to six years.

They were convicted at Asheville in 1931 on charges growing out of the failure of the $17,000,000 Central Bank & Trust Co. and since that time have been in a constant battle of appeals and writs in an effort to sidestep the penalties, contending they were "railroaded" because of prejudice.

Unsuccessful at every turn, they appeared today before the State Supreme Court, which had ruled against them in a habeas corpus action, and were committed into the custody of Sheriff Laurence E. Brown and Deputy Frank Lakey, of Asheville.

Chattering Annoys Orator in House, So He Walks Out

A noisy, inattentive House of Representatives yesterday was reproachfully snubbed by one of its members, when its chattering drowned out his speech.

After trying to make himself heard above the buzz of members' voices and the banging of the chairman's gavel, Representative Frank Oliver, temperamental New York Democrat, pickd up his papers and walked off the floor.

He refused to come back, despite the pleas of Representative Lawrence Lewis, of Colorado, who was handling debate on the Johnson utilities bill.

Oklahoma Bank Robbed Of More Than $1,000

Wetumka, Okla., May 9 (AP).—Three young men, armed and unmasked, robbed the American National Bank here today of between $1,000 and $1,500 and escaped in a coupe bearing a Texas license.

Ed Hall, president of the bank, and Jessie Morgan and Mrs. J. R Booker, employes, were forced to accompany the robbers outside the town.

Baltimore to War Against Starlings

Shot 'n' Shell Due to Be Used by Police.

Baltimore, May 9 (Spl.).—The starlings, which have perplexed officials of scores of American cities as to how to get rid of them, are going to face powder and shot in Baltimore.

The City Council has authorized the police department to send shotgun squads against the birds with a view of ousting them from the City Hall dome and other downtown roosting places.

An ordinance providing for the police war on the birds went through lengthy debate and much public discussion before it was finally passed. Bird lovers assailed the ordinance as cruel, and depicted the starlings as friends of mankind because of their propensity toward eating insect pests.

But the starlings' foe carried the day, and the ordinance was passed—not, however, without an amendment declaring that the purpose of the police mass attack on the birds was to frighten them away from the downtown district rather than to exterminate them.

War Gambler Who Won $36,000 Is Divorced

Kansas City, May 9 (AP).—Testimony of gambling with soldiers of allied nations during the World War at a profit of $36,000 enlivened the hearing of a divorce suit here today.

John A. Vincent, former head of the Kansas Ctiy police raiding squad, when asked how he accumulated $76,000 said he saved $40,000 and won the rest by gambling while a soldier. The divorce was granted on a charge of cruelty.

580 Millions Industry Aid Is Approved

One Bill Would Release Federal Reserve and RFC Cash.

By Robert C. Albright.

After three days of debate, the House Banking Committee last night tentatively agreed on a plan to permit up to $580,000,000 in loans to small industries, through Federal Reserve and Reconstruction Finance Corporation channels.

Whipping into a single measure two Senate bills, authorizing industrial loans by both Federal agencies, the committee raised from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000, the total that the RFC might lend to industry.

This RFC credit would supplement $280,000,000 in additional loans the Federal Reserve System might make to industry under another bill, which the House group intends to fuse with the RFC measure.

Both have been reported favorably in the Senate, where the silver monetization fight, injected via the amendment route into one of the measures, is delaying action.

Treasury Pressed.

House Banking Committee agreement on a $50,000,000 increase in total available coincided with a drive on the Treasury by many House members, especially significant in the light of approaching elections.

The demand for funds covers a wide range of interests, from building and loan relief, to "back home" pressure for roads, schools, sanitation and rivers and harbors improvements.

The drive will reach the floor of the House today, when a $450,000,000 bill for Federal highway aid, already favorably reported by the House Roads Committee, is called up for action.

Another House sub-committee has recommended $75,000,000 "to assist education in the States and Territories and the District," while still another faction is arguing $150,000,000 for schools, all to come out of the Federal Treasury.

Showdown Due on PWA.

The final showdown will come when the $1,300,000,000 public works estimates are submitted by the Budget Bureau. Finding that total insufficient to satisfy expanding preelection demands, there will be a free-for-all battle to increase the amount on the floor.

While the House Banking Committee's action in voting $300,000,000 for RFC loans to industry was purely tentative and the center of a heated committee fight, another meeting has been called this morning, when a final vote is expected.

Only $250,000,000 was asked by Chairman Jesse Jones, of the RFC, who yesterday conferred with committee members before and after their executive session.

Backed by the President, who wants particularly to aid the smaller and medium-sized industries, Jones told members he has no idea of duplicating relief planned by the

$75,000 Theft Bared by Arrest

Chicago Police Charge Man With Robbing Rabbi.

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Edward S. Pollock was arrested here today on charges of robbing a Cincinnati rabbi of $75,000 in Chicago last December.

Police said the theft from the rabbi, Dr. Charles S. Levy, prominent Cincinnatian, had not been made public before but that investigators had been working on the case since a suitcase containing securities valued at $75,000 was stolen from his side while he sat in the union depot.

Police stated Pollock confessed, adding that $65,000 of the loot in securities was recovered in his room. He had, he told the police, spent part of the loot on "beautiful women and horses I thought were fast."

Target Plane Crashes, But 'Chutes Save Two

Flint, Mich., May 9 (AP).—A Selfridge Field plane serving as the "target" for four pursuit planes in battle practice crashed and burned today near here, but the two-man crew jumped to safety with their parachutes.

Sergt. Joe Gonzales was injured slightly when his parachute dragged him through a tree and against a fence. The pilot, Lieut. Edwin Warren, landed safely.

Rockefeller Extends His Stay in Florida

Daytona Beach, Fla., May 9 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller, who is approaching his ninty-fifth birthday, today had extended his spring stay at the Casements, his winter home in Ormond Beach.

His latest announced plans were to remain here until shortly before his birthday, July 8, which is to be celebrated at Pocantico Hills, the Rockefeller estate at Tarrytown, N. Y.

American dirigible development suffered a new blow yesterday when it was revealed the giant airship Macon, pride of the Navy air force, proved unable to defend herself and theoretically was "destroyed" in fleet maneuvers off Cuba.

In addition to her theoretical total destruction by attacking airplanes, Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson disclosed the Macon sustained new actual damage on her week-end flight in the war games.

Extent of the damage was not revealed. The dirigible is now in Florida for repair of the new injuries, the second it has suffered in recent weeks. Two girders were broken on the craft's recent transcontinental flight from its permanent base at Sunnyvale, Calif.

The new damages and the Macon's tactical defeat made many high Navy officials cooler than ever toward further experimentation with lighter-than-air craft.

Many believe that unless the

Thorp Nomination, Facing Defeat, Is Withdrawn by Roosevelt.

The Senate yesterday got its first "brain trust" scalp when President Roosevelt withdrew his appointment of Dr. Willard L. Thorp as director of the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau in the Commerce Department, after he was informed the nomination would be rejected.

Reports were current last night, but could not be confirmed, that Dr. John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, another "brain truster" and the sponsor of Thorp, was considering resigning in protest against the withdrawal of the latter's name.

The President acted after Senator Stephens (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Commerce Committee, where Thorp's name was pending, informed him a poll of that group showed 11 members opposed to confirmation and 5 in favor. Stephens suggested the name be withdrawn before the committee adopted an unfavorable report.

Thorp has been charged with having registered as a Republican when he was professor of economics

Tampa Pupils Protest End of Free Lunch

Tampa, Fla., May 9 (AP).—Pupils of three Tampa schools today staged demonstrations at the school buildings as a protest against cancellation of free lunch tickets by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration offices here.

The tickets, issued to needy children, were withdrawn two days ago because of reduction in funds allotted the county, officials said.

Immediate 25-75 Ratio Insisted Upon

Administration Demands Program Handled by President.

By Elliott Thurston.

Silver conferees hit a new snag yesterday with the result that Senator Borah walked out, the other senatorial conferees threatened another bolt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau left to ponder a sheaf of bills.

Among them was his own idea of a bill which the silverites orally shredded because it was entirely permissive. Senator Alva Adams emerged from the day's final conference, held at the Capitol, to meet reportorial questioning with a question of his own.

"Did you ever run an opera company?" he asked.

"No. Why?"

"Well, this is just like it. They're all prima donnas in this show."

Early in the day Senator Key Pittman went to the Treasury bearing his own draft of a bill.

Silver Purchase Plan.

Beginning with a declaration of policy to the effect that silver be declared a primary monetary metal and that 25 per cent of monetary reserves be acquired and maintained in silver, this bill directed the Treasury to acquire all free silver stocks in the country at not more than 50 cents an ounce and that purchases be made of foreign silver to build up the 25 per cent reserve.

A scheduled conference at the Treasury was called off in favor of one at the Capitol. So Morgenthau, with Herman Oliphant, Treasury counsel, and John G. Harlan, financial assistant, went to the Senate in the afternoon. They met with Senators Elmer Thomas, King, Adams, Smith, Pittman, McCarran and Borah.

Check Given To Roosevelt For Million

In the presence of several hundred guests at the White House, President Roosevelt last night received and allocated his "birthday" check for $1,003,030.98.

Accepting the gift on behalf of the Warm Springs Foundation of Georgia, he expressed the need for other institutions for the benefit of infantile paralysis victims throughout the Nation.

The 3-foot-long check, which represents total proceeds from the several thousand birthday parties given in the President's honor on his fifty-second birthday last January 30, he turned over to trustees of the resort with announcement it would be divided three ways.

Fund Is Divided.

Most of the fund—$650,000—will further the present work at Warm Springs, enabling the foundation "to coordinate the efforts of all engaged in this work." Building and maintenance will take $253,030.98 more, while $100,000 will be set aside for study of infantile paralysis treatment.

Mr. Roosevelt received the check in the East room from Rear Ad-

Roosevelt's Son Father of Girl

6-Pound 6-Ounce Child Born to Elliott and Bride in Texas.

Fort Worth, Tex., May 9 (AP).—A 6-pound 6-ounce daughter was born today to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, son and daughter-in-law of the President. Both the mother and the child, whose name has not yet been announced, were reported "doing nicely."

Mrs. Roosevelt, the former Miss Ruth Googins, Fort Worth society girl, and the second son of the President were married at Burlington, Iowa, last July 22, four months after they first met at a rodeo in Fort Worth.

Roosevelt was divorced by his first wife, the former Miss Elizabeth Doner, of Philadelphia, five days prior to his second marriage.

President, First Lady Send Congratulations

President and Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday sent congratulations to their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, at Fort Worth, Tex., upon the birth of a daughter, according to the Associated Press.

U. S. May Order Ships to Liberia

Inhuman Treatment of Kroo Tribesmen Reported.

Geneva, May 9 (U.P.).—The United States is considering dispatching warships to Liberia, colored republic on the West Coast of Africa, to investigate rumors of alleged inhuman treatment of Kroo tribesmen by Liberian soldiers, it was authoritatively reported in League of Nations quarters tonight.

Great Britain and France may cooperate with Washington in sending warships, the reports said. Inquiry would be extended to Liberia's acceptance of a league plan for assistance to maintain peace in the disturbed republic, founded under United States auspices as an African haven for Americans of the colored race.

Representatives of these three countries, at the instance of the British, have agreed to consult at Geneva through the league council regarding measures to be taken.

'Bulldog' Sweeney Admits Two Holdups; Sentence Set Friday

Pleading guilty to two charges of robbery and assault, Elmer (Bulldog) Sweeney, only recently released from the Lorton Reformatory, where he served two years for killing Talley Day, yesterday laid himself liable to a possible 50-year sentence from Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Supreme Court.

Sweeney admitted before Justice Gordon that he was a member of the gang that held up a gasoline filling station at Fourteenth street and Maryland avenue northeast and slugged the manager after robbing him of a small amount of money.

He also admitted that he was with three others when the gas station at Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast was robbed. In the latter affair a colored companion was shot and killed by Policeman Watson Salkeld, who discovered the quartet rifling the safe.

John A. Mullins and William F. Lowry were indicted with Sweeney in the Fourteenth street robbery. They have not appeared for trial. Sweeney will be brought up for sentence tomorrow. Talley Day, who was slain by Sweeney in a speakeasy brawl several years ago, was known as a small-time racketeer to police.

Senate Rejects Ban on Stock Margin Deals

Plan Is Offered for Trade Commission Handling of Exchange Law.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Having beaten off attempts Tuesday to modify the stock market control bill, the Senate yesterday again indicated satisfaction with the existing draft of the measure by refusing to outlaw marginal trading in securities through brokers.

This proposal was sponsored by Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, who has had a hand in framing every major piece of financial legislation since the Federal Reserve act was passed in 1913. But the leaders of his party declined to support him and his amendment was defeated, 30 to 48.

Bulkley's proposal was defeated by a combination of the conservative Republicans and the Democratic leadership—those known as progressives being the principal supporters of the amendment. It accomplished the unusual result, however, of bringing together on an issue two Democrats who are openly hostile to each other—Senators Carter Glass, of Virginia, and Huey P. Long, of Louisiana. Both favored the amendment.

Long Comes to Aid.

An amusing incident in the debate occurred when the peppery Glass was denouncing stock market "gambling." Long came to his aid with the suggestion that whereas "the roulette table takes only all you have, the stock market takes away from you more than you have."

"The distinguished Senator from Louisiana knows more about that than I do," asserted the Virginian, with an air of disdain for such assistance.

Immediately after the Bulkley amendment vote Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), of Colorado, offered his amendment providing that the Federal Trade Commission should have jurisdiction over stock exchanges, as provided in the House bill, instead of a new Federal Securities Exchange Commission, as the pending Senate measure provides.

It appears that this is the only amendment not yet voted on over which there is a sharp conflict of opinion. The opponents of the Costigan amendment contend its adoption would weaken the measure, while the advocates claim it would strengenthen regulation of the stock markets. The vote, when it comes, possibly today, is expected to be close.

Altogether about 30 amendments remain to be voted on, but most of them are expected to be rejected by wide margins, since they are designed to modify the bill. One major amendment, which it appears will be overwhelmingly adopted, however, is the proposed Fletcher rider amending the securities act of 1933.

The Senate got off to a slow start in the debate when Senator Roscoe Patterson (Republican) Missouri, consumed the first two hours with a speech, obviously designed for campaign purposes, severely attacking the "New Deal" program.

Patterson contended the Roosevelt program includes fascism, communism, feudalism and "the third century planned economy of the Roman Diocletian."

After this interlude Bulkley offered his amendment.

He contended that speculating in securities is "gambling," and that "no man should ever gamble with borrowed funds." Security gambling, he added, is the only form of gambling which can be carried on with credit, "and with bank credit at that."

Defended by Glass.

Senator Glass said the only argument made against outlawing marginal trading was that it would cause "chaos" because of the large volume of stocks that would have to be liquidated.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed, "how could it create more chaos than was created back in 1929, caused by this stock market gambling?"

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, contended the Bulkley proposal was the "most important" put forward to regulate stock trading—"more important than the bill itself," he added. He said this proposal if adopted would "be worth more than all the other provisions of the bill put together in correcting the evils we have suffered from."

The only argument against the proposal came from Senator Alben Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, who said it would cause large liquidation of stocks, thus depressing the value of securities held by insurance companies, estates and similar institutions.

On the roll call eight Republicans, all progresive except Davis, of Pennsylvania, voted with 21 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite for the amendment. The 48 votes against comprised 18 by Republicans and 30 by Democrats.

Claims Whitney Sponsorship.

Costigan, opening the debate for his proposal to place administration of the legislation under the trade commission, said that it would take at least six months to set up a new agency. The trade commission, he argued, could "take command of the situation at once." He argued administration by the trade commission would be more economical, estimating the cost under a new agency at $500,000, annually—which would be paid by the stock exchange.

President Hints Debt 'Tokens' May Save Nations Penalty

part payments without invoking penalties of the Johnson act. In fact, the latter might even be considered as a weapon to force "token," if not full, payments.

View of Cummings.

"Should any authoritative statement, in harmony with this opinion," Mr. Cummings wrote, "be issued in the form of an administrative declaration that named countries are or are not in default, I should be inclined to follow it in so far as the Department of Justice is charged with the responsibility of instituting prosecution * * *."

Mr. Roosevelt reiterated his policy that any of the 13 debtor countries, unable to pay, should come forward and state its case to this Nation. Such has been the practice, he pointed out, and this is not changed by the Johnson act. Hence, the impression was obvious he would welcome negotiations before the next payment date, June 15.

The President waved aside inquiries about the status of "token" payments next month, declining to prognosticate without facts. He did say, however, in keeping with Secretary Hull's remarks the day before, that such payments would be considered in accordance with individual circumstances.

Meanwhile, the ambassadors of two defaulter nations—Andre de Laboulaye of France and Paul May of Belgium — joined the steady stream of anxious foreign representatives who have been calling at the State Department in quest of information. Discussions were described by Acting Secretary William Phillips as purely informal.

The French Ambassador voiced the desire of some members of the French cabinet to reach some solution to the debt question, but said that no formal proposal had been made this Government. Envoys of other debtor nations have made similar trips to the State Department during the last two weeks in an attempt to end confusion.

Showdown Due Soon.

Every indication pointed to another showdown on the debt question within the next fortnight, when President Roosevelt will send a war debts message to Congress. There was strong reason to believe the Johnson act will kindle European countries to a sterner realization of their obligations to this Government.

Postponement of the vital debt issue over both the June 15 and December 15 payment dates last year has lulled this realization to too low a point, officials believe. They are concerned with reviving sentiment for settlement and as a means to this end the case of Finland is expected to be a prize exhibit.

Lone among the debtors, Finland has met every payment in full. Under the proposed resettlement of her debt, all but a small fraction of her payments to date would apply on the $9,000,000 principal, thus reducing it by $3,500,000 instead of $600,000. The remainder would be spread over 30 years with no interest.

If this formula should be applied to other nations, the approximately $21,000,000,000 in war debts and interest would be scaled down to about $11,000,000,000, by eliminating interest. Whereas Congress has shown, and is evidencing, strong sentiment against reducing the debts, it was thought an argument to do away with interest might be made convincing.

Meantime, Secretary Hull yesterday gave his indorsement to a proposed investigation by the House of the possibility of accepting tin in payment for war debts. By letter he approved the idea as the House Rules Committee considered a resolution by Representative Millard Caldwell (Democrat), Florida, who said $85,000,000 worth of tin should be imported annually.

Nation's Wheat Is Threatened As West Bakes

Sharp Cut in Crop Seen, but Wallace Discounts Fear of Shortage.

Wheat production probably will be curtailed sharply this year by an almost unprecedented drought which has spread through nine Western States, Secretary Wallace declared yesterday.

He likened the situation to the growing season of 1894, when the rainfall was the lowest in the history of the Weather Bureau. He added that weather conditions so far this year were more threatening than in 1930, when crops were seared by a record-breaking drought.

Published reports quoting Wallace as predicting the 1934 production of wheat in the United States might be only 450,000,000 bushels, instead of 800,000,000 as usual, led the Secretary to say he had been misunderstood. He later declined to make any estimate.

He emphasized his interest in the drought by telephoning the Weather Bureau and leaving word that he be notified immediately "if it even looks like rain."

Damage Estimate Out Today.

The Secretary said any estimate of damage to this year's crops should be obtained from a monthly bulletin to be issued today.

He cited an anticipated carryover of 270,000,000 bushels as assurance that the chances of a wheat shortage in this country were "about one in twenty." He explained that one of the primary functions of the Farm Administration was to meet such conditions as the present.

Wallace stressed the fact that subnormal rainfall in May was almost unheard of. He said present conditions resulted from the cumulative effect of low rainfall and high temperatures for several months.

Crop Effects Uncertain.

He indicated the dry period probably would have a significant bearing on the spring wheat crop, but said "its effect on winter wheat can't be sized up at this stage of the game. It will have a real effect on hay and oats."

Decisive weather, so far as corn is concerned, he pointed out, will be from July 1 to August 10.

States where the situation is most serious, Wallace said, included the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky.

The weekly crop bulletin of the Weather Bureau reported "abnormally warm and dry weather" prevailed over a large portion of the country and was having a serious effect on crops.

Relief Short-Lived.

"In the interior valleys the central plains and the Northwest," the report read, "relief from droughty conditions was afforded during the past week only in limited areas and in most of these the rainfall was insufficient to permanently relieve the situation."

Helpful showers were noted in parts of South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri and in Southern States, but otherwise "droughty conditions were intensified by the absence of rain and the prevalence of high temperatures."

The report said rains in Kansas, principal wheat State, were beneficial to the eastern half, but deterioration of the crop continued in the western half.

Golf Expert Divorces Wife Who Shot Him

Los Angeles, May 9 (AP).—Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles golf professional, was granted a divorce today from Billie Mangrum, former Dallas, Tex., college girl, who shot him last fall. The decree was awarded on the grounds of cruelty.

Mangrum refused to sign a complaint against his wife after the shooting. The incident was not mentioned in the divorce proceedings today.

Kidnapers Flee Into Mexico

Cananea, Sonora, May 9 (AP).—Their secret plans disclosed by their self-implicated "contact" man, the kidnapers of June Robles were believed fleeing through Sonora today with the 6-year-old girl still in their possession, and Mexican police virtually at their heels.

Alarms were sounded throughout the northern Sonora country as authorities sought to close in on the trio, which sidestepped two traps laid by United States and Mexican investigators on information from the "contact" man who was held in technical custody in Arizona.

Documentary evidence from the man, it was said by officials, described the fugitives as an American man and a Mexican man and his wife.

The description fitted three adults who had with them a girl said to resemble June. They disappeared from Cananea a few hours before searchers descended on the hut in which they had been living here.

Two days earlier they had been in Santa Cruz, Sonora, 20 miles northwest of here, Mexican police said their investigaton showed, but had fled shortly before searchers from Nogales reached the little town last Monday.

Sugar Control Bill Is Signed, Tariff Pared

President Indorses Law Fixing Quotas for U. S. and Off Shore.

With opinion divided as to the ultimate effect on America's sweet tooth, Government control of sugar production in this country and importation from island Territories was established yesterday as President Roosevelt signed into law the Costigan-Jones bill.

At the same time the President issued a proclamation reducing the tariff on Cuban sugar from 2 cents to 1½ cents a pound, which is expected to counterbalance processing taxes to be imposed by the Secretary of Agriculture on both domestic and offshore production.

Final enactment of the sugar bill coincided with a severe drought threatening crops of Western sugar-producing States. This caused Secretary Wallace to put off for the present quotas for the insular countries, which may benefit if crop damage proves serious.

Crop Quotas Given.

The Costigan-Jones act, which establishes sugar as a basic commodity subject to control methods set up by the agricultural adjustment act, fixes production of continental beet-sugar growers at 1,550,000 short tons and cane growers of Florida and Louisiana at 260,000 tons.

Quotas for the Philippines, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands and Cuba are to be allocated by the Secretary of Agriculture with the aid of a Cabinet committee named by the President. Other members are Secretary of Interior Ickes, Secretary of War Dern and Secretary of State Hull.

Reduction of the tariff on sugar marked the President's first important use of his flexible tariff powers, which would be broadened by the pending tariff bill. His action, taken on unanimous recommendation of the Federal Tariff Commission, lowers the duty on Cuban sugars from 2 to 1½ cents and on other sugars from 2½ to 1.875 cents a pound.

Mr. Roosevelt specified in a statement that followed his approval of the bill that the processing taxes must not exceed the amount of the tariff reduction, which is effective June 8. The tax is expected to be approximately ½ cent a pound, which would yield about $60,000,000 for domestic growers who agree to curtail production.

Says Price Won't Go Up.

"This means that the processing or compensatory taxes will not increase, in themselves, the price to be paid by the ultimate consumers," the President stated, "and at the same time our own sugar producers will have the opportunity to obtain, in the form of benefit payments, a fairer return from their product."

Mr. Roosevelt expressed hope the bill will contribute to the betterment of conditions in the island Territories, which had protested the act, as well as among domestic producers. The Cabinet committee was chosen to help administer the act since it applies to countries under their departments.

While the President said the processing taxes will not, "in themselves," increase prices, many were of the belief that the sugar act will raise costs, since it provides for certain minimum labor standards. Penalties are imposed for false statements concerning taxes, which might be used for unwarranted price increases.

miral Cary T. Grayson, who acted in the absence of Henry L. Doherty, of New York, chairman of the Nation-wide observance, who was unable to attend. Admiral Grayson said the gift was tendered both "to help in the great fight against infantile paralysis and as an evidence of the people's appreciation of your great humanitarianism."

Voicing his "heartfelt appreciation to all who participated" in the birthday balls, Mr. Roosevelt discussed the necessity of further treatment for paralysis victims in order to return them to useful citizenship. He declared:

"There are no complete statistics to show just what infantile paralysis has done to our people, but it seems conservative to estimate from figures that we have, that there are at least 200,000 people in the United States who bear the marks of it in degrees ranging from the impairment of a few muscles to being reduced to total physical helplessness."

Coordination Is Urged.

Only by coordinating efforts of all existing institutions "can we hope for real progres toward doing the utmost for the many thousands of victims of infantile paralysis," he said. Interest created by the balls, he added, has increased support of at least some of these institutions.

"Medical cience has advanced so far hat a very large proportion of those who, for one reasn or another, have becme crippled, can be restred to useful citizenship. It remains, therefore, only to spread the gospel in every part of the Nation to enable us to make the same relative prograss that we have already made in the field of tuberculosis."

The White House ceremony was followed by a dinner at the Shoreham, attended by local chairmen of the balls from all parts of the country. Speakers included Keith Morgan and Basil O'Connor, trustees of the foundation; Charles S. Hart and aMtthew Woll.

at Amherst College. Stephens, however, denied this was the reason for the committee's attitude. He said those opposing the professor believed he lacked practical business experience.

Professors Less Popular.

Sentiment against giving choice positions in the Administration to professors has been growing in the Senate for some time. The Senate Agricultural Committee is now bottling up the nomination of Dr. Rexfor G. Tugwell, sometimes described as chief of the brain trust, to be Undersecretary of Agriculture. He is now the Assistant Secretary. Chairman Ellison D. Smith of the committee has declared the appointment should go to a "dirt farmer" and not to the former Columbia professor.

President Roosevelt in the message to the Senate asking that Thorp's name be returned to him also withdrew the appointment of Rene A. Viosca to be United States district attorney for eastern Louisiana. This was a victory for Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, who opposed Viosca's appointment and was prepared to tell the Senate the appointee was "personally obnoxious" to him.

Viosca's appointment was reported unfavorably by the Senate Tuesday because Long made the "personal obnoxious" complaint and the withdrawal of the nomination seemed to indicate that the Senate intended to exercise its veto power over appointments when they were gravely disagreeable to one of their number.

From time immemorial whenever a Senator has publicly contended that an appointment of a person in his State was "personally obnoxious" to him, the Senate has rejected the nomination without further ado. But this precedent was ignored when Long recently raised it against Daniel D. Moore, to be collector of internal revenue for Louisiana.

Moore's Name Still Pending.

Moore's name, however, is still pending before the Senate, and if the precedent is adhered to, it is likely his nomination will be rejected, which would give "Kingfish" Long the whip-hand over Louisiana patronage, despite the Administration's desire to give the Federal plums in that State to his political enemies. Observers of Louisiana politics here were shocked at the withdrawal of the name of Viosca, who is president of the New Orleans Bar Association.

Thorp was appointed to head the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce last August. His name was sent to the Senate in January, but has been successfully bottled up in the committee.

It is understood that some time ago President Roosevelt and Secretary of Commerce Roper each wrote to Chairman Stephens asking that he have the nomination reported to the Senate. When Stephens polled hsi committee informally, he found that the vote against Thorp would be 2 to 1.

Stephens indicated a reluctance to discuss the matter, beyond saying that it was not true that Thorp was being rejected solely because he registered several years ago as a Republican voter. H said many Snators thought the Amherst teacher lacked the practical business experience that the director of the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau should have.

Earlier this week an organization calling itself the "Democratic Protective Committee"—its members have not been identified—sent to members of the committee a letter charging Thorp was a Republican and had dismissed Democratic employes of the bureau while leaving Republicans secure in their jobs.

Called a "Liability."

This letter contended that Thorp as a Democrat was "a liability, and a distinct asset to the Republicans." Thorp was only 34 years old when he was appointed and his selection at the time was hailed as a victory for merit over politics. Economists and statisticians, who have a deep interest in the work of the Foreign and Domestic Commerce Bureau, expressed satisfaction over the appointment.

Born in Oswego, N. Y., Thorp received his A. B. degree from Amherst when he was 21 years old and the next year his M. A. degree from the University of Michigan. He obtained his doctorate degree from Columbia in 1924. From 1926 until his appointment he held the chair of economics at Amherst.

Pedestrians Lead List of Auto Victims; Carelessness Blamed

"People fail to realize that the wider the street the more serious the pedestrian problem, and pedestrians count for the majority of traffic fatalities. The longer it takes a pedestrian to cross a street, the more chances there are that he will be hit."

With automobiles moving at the rate of 4,200 to 4,500 an hour on a street like Pennsylvania avenue, and at a much higher frequency during the rush periods, the problem of just how a person may walk across a street without taking his life in his hands becomes a serious one.

The problem becomes more complicated at most corners, where left and right turns are permitted. By the time automobiles turning a corner have cleared an intersection frequently the lights have changed and cars are moving in the other direction, leaving the unfortunate pedestrian stranded.

Light Experiment Failed.

"Could not this be solved with the use of pedestrian lights at least at some corners; lights that would hold up traffic in both directions for a few seconds to allow pedestrians to cross in safety?" Van Duzer was asked.

"We have tried it," he said, "and it resulted in slowing up traffic to such an extent that the plan proved impractical, especially during rush hours."

Van Duzer believes that pedestrians need education as much or probably more than drivers. He pointed out that while there are many drivers who do not keep their minds continually on what they are doing, there are also pedestrians who cross streets with their minds on other things besides the fact they are crossing.

There are so many of these that the traffic statistical records for Washington have a separate space in describing pedestrian accidents in which to list as a cause inattention of pedestrians. The record shows that during the last three years 336 pedestrians who were injured and 5 who were killed are listed under the heading "was inattentive."

Rules for Pedestrians.

Van Duzer listed two rules for pedestrians, observance of which he believes would greatly reduce the number of accidents. They are these:

At crossings where there are signal lights, cross only on the green light.

A number of cities, particularly West Coast cities, enforce ordinances against pedestrians crossing streets in violation of traffic regulations. They are given tickets and fined exactly as motorists violating regulations are given tickets and fined.

Officials here feel that such a plan would not be practical with the enforcement machinery now available.

However, motorists are not altogether blameless in pedestrian accidents.

Fault of Motorists.

One of the biggest faults of Washington motorists, Van Duzer believes, is the fact that they simply will not turn corners properly.

The rules for turning corners are simple. First, signal your intention to cars at the rear. Then, if you are turning left, stay in left-hand lane. If you are turning right, stay in right-hand lane.

Hundreds of accidents, some of them fatal, occur as cars turn corners. During the past two years 797 persons were injured and eight were killed in accidents occurring as automobiles turned corners.

Van Duzer does not subscribe to the popular theory that depression conditions and the great number of old cars on the streets and highways has much to do with the increase in fatal accidents. The traffic bureau also has figures on this subject. Of the 24,722 cars involved in accidents reported to the police during the last three years, only 453 were reported to have defective brakes.

Brake Inspections.

The Police Department conducts a brake inspection—after an accident. Whenever there is an accident report a police car goes to the scene with a special device and tests the brakes of the car or cars involved, if they are still in such condition that brakes can be tested.

But there is no provision for a periodical inspection of motor vehicles. All used cars that are sold must be inspected for brakes, lights and steering before transfer is permitted. This is the only compulsory inspection provision in the District.

But voluntary inspection service is provided. The District maintains a garage at 485 C street, at which free inspections of brakes, lights and steering gear may be obtained by any motorist between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Van Duzer urged that motorists take advantage of this opportunity for frequent free inspection. But he said not many are doing so.

Compulsory Tests Urged.

"We used to keep open at night," he said, "but the use of the garage fell off to such an extent that it was no longer thought worth while."

Van Duzer said he favors periodic compulsory inspection if it is done by the District itself.

"Many cities have tried the plan of requiring motorists to go to privately operated garages for inspection," he said. "Too many times there was a suspicion that the garage mechanics found things wrong that were not wrong in order to run up repair bills.

"We should have periodic inspection if it is not made a racket. Our own inspectors could examine cars and if they found anything wrong, the car owners could go wherever they pleased for repairs.

"But, of course, that costs a lot of money, more than we have to spend."

Insull Says He Fled to Escape Assassination

the time, with so many people losing money in all lines of investments, they had grounds for their fears.

"Whether their grounds were substantial is beside the question. That was the first reason that decided my sudden departure."

Cites Failing Health.

"The second," the paper continued, "was my health. There is the additional possibility, had I have remained much longer, I might have suffered a fatal collapse.

"The third reason was the subsequent indictments voted here. A political campaign was on. I knew my legal rights and I knew I was not guilty of any wrongdoing. I also knew what could happen in a campaign highly charged with political prejudice."

While Insull rested on his county jail hospital cot today, or rolled around in a wheel chair, a judge of a higher court agreed to look into the matter of his imprisonment tomorrow and see if an injustice had been done by setting Insull's bond at $200,000.

Judge Will M. Sparks of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals granted a writ of habeas corpus requiring the Government to produce its famous prisoner tomorrow morning. The judge acted after Attorney Floyd E. Thompson had argued that $200,000 was an unreasonable amount, and that to stay in jail, even in the jail hospital, would endanger Insull's life.

May Be Freed Today.

If Judge Sparks can be convinced that the bond is too much, and orders it reduced, Attorney Thompson said Insull will be bailed out some time tomorrow.

Insull may not be brought into court for the hearing which means freedom or more jail for him. Ordinarily, the prisoner appears, but Judge Sparks said it was unnecessary to bring Insull from the jail just to hear legal arguments.

While these legal expeditions were under way to rescue Insull, the Government pushed its cases against him. He was notified to appear in Federal court Friday, to hear himself accused of using the mails to defraud and of removing some $2,000,000 of the funds of a bankrupt company.

The other defendants in the mail case already have been arraigned, but the bankruptcy case defendants—Insull, his son, Samuel, jr., and seven others—will stand before the bar for the first time.

Keeps Mind Off Business.

Insull spent his first full day in jail in good spirits and talked freely to interviewers. The jail barber cut his shaggy white hair, last cut, he recalled, at the expense of the Turkish government.

Business subjects were definitely "out." To questions about one of the Insull company receiverships, he said:

"I don't know about that, and I'm not going to worry myself about it. I haven't many more years to live."

Will he tell a story of financial maneuvers that might embarrass leading citizens, when he takes the witness stand?

"Bunk," he said vigorously, "there's nothing I could tell."

580 Millions Aid to Industry Wins Approval

Limits Loans to Million.

His bill would limit loans to any one industry to $1,000,000, made for the sole purpose of "maintaining and increasing employment of labor." The power to extend such credit would expire January 31, 1935.

Chairman Eugene Black, of the Federal Reserve Board, recently told the committee his bill to permit up to $280,000,000 in Reserve loans to industry through rediscounting of long-time paper, was all that was necessary the first year, anyway. At the same time he made public statistics showing industry could use up to $622,000,000 in such credit.

But Jones indorsed both the RFC and Federal Reserve relief measures and held the latter should be made permanent, in the interest of freeing more long term credit.

After a wrangle, a majority of the committee decided that both bills were necessary, agreed to write them into one measure, and to increase the Jones bill's authorization by $50,000,000.

"We thought there should be two strings to the bow," commented one committee member.

Methodists Set Hood School's Opening July 7

Religious Students Will Gather at Frederick for Courses.

Frederick, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The Hood College Summer School of Religious Education for the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held this year from July 7 to 14 on the campus of Hood College here, according to plans announced by Dr. John C. Millian, conference director.

This will be the second year for the school, which was begun last summer as a Baltimore Conference project in teacher training for religious education.

It is expected, Dr. Millian said, that about 24 courses will be offered this year by a faculty of some 17 trained teachers. Studies will include specialization and elective courses in the standard training school program for nursery, kindergarten, primary, junior, intermediate and young people's departments, and classes for church school superintendents and pastors.

Details of these plans are being worked out by last year's faculty members, many of whom will serve this year.

There were 93 students enrolled last year and many more are expected this year. Church school teachers and leaders of young people from Methodist churches in Maryland, District of Columbia and parts of Virginia and West Virginia attend this school.

Floridians Invade Tomato Farming

Competition in Somerset Upsets Labor Supply.

Princess Anne, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Florida and other Southern tomato graders, wrappers and packers, who have prepared the bulk of the Somerset County green tomato crop for market for several seasons, this year have entered into direct competition with local producers.

Hundreds of acres of Somerset farm land have been leased by the Southerners, who are this year planting their own crops on the Eastern Shore. The effect on local producers is a matter for conjecture. Little skilled labor is available locally, producers relying almost wholly on the help of experienced wrappers, graders and packers from the Southern centers.

State Police Find Rioting Quelled

Clash at Dunbar Plant of Short Duration.

Charleston, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—State police were rushed to the Fletcher Enamel Co. plant at Dunbar today following reports of rioting between pickets and employes, but found all quiet when they arrived.

About 400 persons had gathered around the plant and attempted to prevent workers from entering. Several fist fights resulted, officers said.

Too Often

Judge Irked by Sprees, Issues Warning.

Waynesboro, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—It's not so bad once a month but—

Judge A. C. Kimler today said:

"This practice of getting drunk every week-end must be stopped. In the future I'm going to put a stiff sentence on any person who appears before me more than once a month on a charge of drunkenness."

Then he sentenced Ernest Parnell to 12 months for "common drunkenness."

Starving Man Faints in Cell

Admiral Hart Presses Chicken Theft Count on Suspect.

Baltimore, May 9 (Spl.).—The case of an Annapolis colored man who admitted he stole chickens from the superintendent of the Naval Academy, allegedly to save his family from starvation, and who fainted in a cell here while being held for the grand jury, is being investigated by welfare officials.

The man is Charles Enoch Brooks, father of two children. He was arrested in Annapolis about two weeks ago, after several fowls had disappeared from a chicken coop in the rear of the home of Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Academy commandant. Because the theft was committed on Government property, Brooks was sent to Baltimore for trial before a United States commissioner.

He was held in the City Jail for a week while officials of the United States district attorney's office investigated. Welfare officials at Annapolis reported Brooks' family had received a $3 food order early in March, and another similar order later in the month.

Brooks, in a cell at the City Jail, refused to eat, because, he said, his family had no food and he was unwilling to eat while they starved.

As Admiral Hart pressed charges, Brooks was arraigned yesterday before U. S. Commissioner Supplee, and held for the grand jury. An hour later he was found unconscious in a cell in the Federal Building. Doctors said starvation caused him to collapse.

Somerset Faces First G. O. P. Race in Decade

Princess Anne, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—I. Fred Phoebus, a brother of Harry T. Phoebus, Somerset County Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Somerset.

Deputy Sheriff Robert Maddox, of Marion, also has announced his candidacy for this post and unless one can be induced to withdraw, the first Republican primary in Somerset in ten years will be held.

Trout Put in Streams.

Durbin, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Twenty-three pails of brook trout were received here from the Federal fish hatchery at White Sulphur Springs and were distributed in streams by Forest Ranger W. C. Percival.

Lorrain Price Parole Asked

Gov. Ritchie May Release Maryland Girl Bandit in Near Future.

Baltimore, May 9 (Spl.).—Maryland's bobbed-haired bandit of five years ago, Lorrain Price, may be given a parole by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, as a result of recommendations made today by Garlord Lee Clark, State parole commissioner.

Mr. Clark reported to the Governor that the girl's mother and stepfather, who came here from Tennessee, appeared at his office last week and promised that they would provide a home for her and see that she was well cared for. He said the girl's mother was only 14 when Lorrain was born.

The girl is now in the Maryland Penitentiary, to which she was sentenced to 15 years on charges of participating in a series of holdups in Baltimore and Maryland in 1929. She was 17 when sentenced.

Her companion, John A. Startt, 23 years old, also was sentenced to 15 years. The couple were arrested in Washington, on their way to Richmond, two hours after a filling station on the Annapolis boulevard near Baltimore had been held up.

Martinsburg Gem Store Burglarized

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Thieves smashed the front display window of the L. A. Roberts jewelry store in the business section early yesterday with a brick and escaped with half a dozen wrist watches valued at $150.

Hundreds of dollars worth of other jewelry was exposed, but none of it disturbed, it was stated.

New Record Seen For Va. Revenue

May Exceed Total in 1933 by $15,000,000.

Richmond, May 9 (Spl.).—Internal revenue collections in Virginia for the fiscal year ending June 30 will set a new all-time record, and may exceed last year's total by as much as $15,000,000, it was estimated here today.

Swelled by $9,365,745 collected in April, the first ten months of the fiscal year show a total of $97,838,441, or $16,400,000 more than the $79,230,554 for the same ten months of the previous fiscal year. The ten months of 1933-34 are only $6,000,000 below the $103,792,269.71 reported for the entire previous fiscal year.

Collector N. B. Early, jr., basing his estimate on the results already seen, is confident that the 1933-34 fiscal year total will reach $118,000,000.

Brown Again Seeking West Va. Senate Seat

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—J. Slidell Brown, Elkins newspaper editor, is the first State senator to certify for reelection with the secretary of state. He is a Democrat and represents the Thirteenth District.

W. H. Koontz, of Fairview, today filed as a candidate for Republican nomination to the State House of Delegates for Marion County.

Pay Increase Voted Teachers

Carroll County Board of Education Agrees to Raise Budget.

Westminster, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Following a request by representatives of the various high school faculties, the Carroll County Board of Education has agreed to provide for an increase in the salary schedule in next year's budget.

The increase will be based on the 1932-33 school year schedule and will include payment of the bonus deducted that year. Although the board's action would not affect the State deduction of from 10 to 15 per cent made last year, adoption of the new schedule will represent an average increase of 10 per cent in salaries.

M. S. H. Unger, superintendent of schools, recommended that the Winfield school buildings be condemned.

It was stated that an engineer employed to inspect the Winfield school, had reported the buildings unfit and not worth repairing.

Campbell in FERA Post.

Abingdon, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—W. R. Campbell, of Abingdon, has been appointed project officer of the FERA for Washington County, it was announced from the office of District Administrator H. E. Mecredy at Bristol.

Veteran Hiker Dies in Virginia

Billy Dietz, 94, Never Used Train Nor Auto.

Norton, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Billy Dietz, 94, famous as "the pedestrian of southwest Virginia," is dead at his home here. He was reputed to have traveled all over the United States, but never to have been on a train or in an automobile.

"Legs," he used to say, "are good enough for me to get around on." And to his death he scorned mechanical means of transportation.

A few days ago he returned from a tramp to Washington to inquire about his pension. He was a veteran of the Union Army.

West Virginia Lutheran Synod Meeting Is Set

Jacksons Mill, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—The West Virginia Synod of the United Lutheran Church will hold its annual meeting June 24 to 29 at the State 4-H camp here.

Forty churches will be represented. The annual conference of the West Virginia Lutheran Brotherhood and the annual meeting of the Synodical Society, woman's State organization, will be held at the same time. The synod president is Dr. A. B. Leamer, of Charleston, and its secretary is the Rev. C. A. Portz, of Wheeling.

Davis Winner Of Scholarship In Post Contest

Captures G. U. Foreign Service School Prize; Waldo Second.

The closest of the campus finals thus far held in The Washington Post Scholarship Comeptition yesterday resulted in the capture of a four-year tuition scholarship at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service by Chester L. Davis, honor senior at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase (Md.) High School, and a compromise recommendation of judges that a second partial scholarship at the same school be created for the alternate, William Waldo, consistent honor-roll member at Western High School.

Dr. Edmund A. Dalsh, regent of the school, congratulated both the top winners and their seven opponents in yesterday's finals on the Georgetown Campus. At a reception to the finalists in the Riggs Library, which concluded the day's program of tests and entertainment, he declared:

"The examinations this morning had very gratifying results. The candidates displayed an acquaintance with public affairs which would seem to justify the decision made by The Post to present them as the best qualified contestants of high-school grade. After consideration and weighing of different factors, Chester Davis was voted the scholarship winner by the examining committee."

Waldo Close Second.

"However, the margin of merit between Davis and Waldo was such that Waldo well deserves distinguished mention," continued Dr. Walsh. "The committee then suggested that a special testimonial of excellence be awarded to Mr. Waldo in some concrete and appropriate form, to be determined by the authorities of the university. This recommendation has ben submitted to the executive faculty for action in the near future."

Dr. Walsh later stated his hope that this action will result in creation of at least a partial scholarship for Waldo. "Both of these boys impressed us as exceptionally promising youths," he declared.

Oppoisng Davis and Waldo were seven other outstanding seniors from local and nearby high schools, as well as certificates of award and sterling silver medals. They included eKrmit Vermilyea, of the Hedgesville (W. Va.) High School; Alvin Norman Blum, of the Charles Town (W. Va.) High School; William Sterling, of St. Mary's Academy, Leonardtown, Md.; Louis Shuman, of the Great Falls (Md.) High School, and the following from local schools: Arthur Carbonell, of Central High School; Ralph Tyner, of Roosevelt, and Samuel Clements, of Eastern.

"The biggest thrill I ever had in my life," was Davis' comment on his own emotions when he heard himself announced as the winner. "I can't understand how I made it," he added, "except that the test dealt with subjects which have especially interested me for several years. The examination was pretty stiff, especially the reporting of Dr. Healy's lecture to his class in current foreign affairs. I did enjoy that, though. We took notes and then had to write it up in a half hour. I'd have liked to have done a better job in that writing, however."

Dad Gets Much Credit.

To his "dad," chester L. Davis, chief of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Georgetown champion gives much credit for his interest and ambitions along social science lines.

"I've always discussed my studies in government with dad," he admitted. "I'm going to take law after this course, and then would Davis is president of his school's like to get into politics rather than Government research work." debating team. This is his first year in Chevy Chase, his previous high school work having been covered in Evanston, Ill.

Philosophy of New Deal Told by Chevy Chase Honor Senior.

The Social Philosophy of the New Deal.

By Chester L. Davis, Jr.

Winner of a four-year tuition scholarship in the Georgtown University School of Foreign Service, one of five major awards in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

We are in the twilight of one economic and social era facing a new future. Both President Roosevelt and his disciples, on the one hand, and the potentates of capitalistic laissez-faire, on the other hand, are striving for a common ground which preserves the best of the capitalistic system and at the same time are seeking a humane system, in which man and machine balance and social good comes before profits.

In 1929 the wheels of industry began to lose their ponderous rhythm. In 1932 "silence reigned where sound had been." In 1933 President Roosevelt began patching a threadbare economic system. Under his leadership of action America is germinating a philosophy which aims to save the present and bridge over into the future. Social upheaval was averted, and the people given new hope, by the strong leadership of the President.

Congress moved with haste to enact a number of emergency measures. These rapid moves all tended to lessen the weight of the crisis on the people. They looked toward the gradual substitution of a new social era in the place of the old. The New Deal in this light ceased to be an emergency program and entered a period of transition in which a new type of social thought supplanted the old.

Philosophy of New Deal.

The social philosophy of the New Deal is so closely interwoven with economic policy that it is impossible to consider them separately. The subject stands out against the economic background of recent generations—the shift of the United States from an agricultural to an industrial Nation, from debtor to creditor, the development of machines which displaced human employment without distributing proportionally the means for men to buy, and the swift growth of nationalism throughout the world.

Clear-sighted men realize that capitalism is an economic system which thrives only with growth, and when growth ceases the system fails. For years the American frontier offered such growth, and when finally the frontier dwindled away, capitalism came to a crashing stop with the depression of 1893.

However, the business leaders turned from the glutted American markets and once again followed a frontier—a frontier of new international trade. Some time after 1920 this new frontier ceased to exist. This fact was concealed and money was lent abroad to finance the purchase of our goods. About 1928 lending stopped, with the realization that the loans would not be repaid.

Once again America was brought to a jolting halt by depression. The present Administration stepped into these delicate economic fields with the aim of developing the consuming ability of the home markets. When farmer and laborer have means with which to buy, American capitalism will need no artificial expansion, but will be assured of a steady output to meet the needs of a real consumption.

There is enough productive capacity in American industry and agriculture to supply every man, woman and child with a higher standard of living and a greater degree of leisure than the world has ever known. The problem is how to create buying power equal to the power to produce and consume.

Welfare Above Profits.

The old system, unaided, will not accomplish this. The machine has produced a gradual growth of unemployment. Millions of men desiring work are no longer offered the opportunity. These men are as much our social responsibility as those who are incapable of work.

The social aim of the New Deal is to elevate human welfare above profits. The first stages of such an accomplishment must be necessarily economic. Realizing that millions of unemployed workers and debt burdened, impoverished farmers are the results of our own mistakes, the Federal Government has courageously attacked the problem along all fronts.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the Public Works Administration and the Civil Works Administration all aim to throw an impetus into our economic structure that will revive buying power and allow business to start up once again. The NRA demands that opportunities for employment must be distributed among all who are willing to work without lessening the income of the employed individual.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration aims to assist the farmer to adjust his production to the needs of his market. Thus the farmer can receive a fair return for his goods and bring back into the market his tremendous buying power. The Farm Credit Administration is reorganizing the debt structure of agriculture to avert wholesale bankruptcy. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation is making it possible for men and women to acquire homes and to own them in security.

A vast new housing program, to promote new building and to provide satisfactory homes for those who now live in hovels and tenements, is about to be launched. These are typical outstanding examples of the methods of attack upon the depression. The object is to replace fear with security in the hearts and minds of the American people.

Seeks to Help Trade.

The President is asking for powers to negotiate trade relations with other countries which may enable America to lead the world out of the welter of international economic warfare into a new day of international trade which will promote employment throughout the world. Unless international trade is restored, then the problem must be one of coordinating industry and agriculture in a planned economy which can be brought about only through the central powers of the Federal Government. If the individual competitive units of production in industry and agriculture are left in their present state, fighting for the restricted market according to the old plan of survival of the fittest, destruction and chaos will result.

Closely following his desire of opening a tremendous new consuming power at home, the President bluntly told industry that the only enterprises which will survive are those which work for the good of the people and do not depend on the suffering of society. In his inaugural address he stated:

"It seems to me to be equally plain that no business which depends for existence upon paying less than living wages to its workers has any right to continue in this country—and by living wages I mean more than a bare subsistence level—I mean wages of decent living, and decent living among 125,000,000 people will eventually mean the opening up to industry the richest market the world has ever known."

To assist in the recovery program, a series of industrial codes of "fair competition" have been adopted. These codes are so constructed that the consumer is protected from trusts and monopolies. They so regulate industry that only healthy enterprise can exist under their rulings and the industrial "deadwood" will perish—to the benefit of the entire society. Fair competition will allow small industries to exist and will greatly lessen the burden on the consumer because stringent regulation will prevent monopolies from instituting unfair prices.

Labor, Capital Problem.

Thus the New Deal leaders have ordained the rights of industry. The next problem lies in the relationship between the laborer and the capitalist. The rights of capital are not thrown blindly aside, as they were during the Jacksonian era, nor are the laboring classes overlooked as they were during the period following the great war. The leaders of the present Administration realize that there should be a balance between labor and capital, and during the present transitional period that balance is being sought.

In order to open vast new fields for consumption at home, the "New Dealers" move along these lines: (1) considering the ability of the machine to do the work of many men, working hours must be shortened in order that more men will find employment; and (2) these men working on shorter hours will be paid satisfactory wages in order that they may be able to live decently and absorb the fruits of the machine. Thus the Administration has cared for the rights of millions of American laborers. Benefits are already being reaped, for the sweat shop has been destroyed, the 60-cent day has been abolished, child labor is gone and slowly American laborers are finding their places back in the factories.

From cities and factories the recovery program switches to the country and attacks the paradox of starvation within the lap of plenty. The agricultural philosophy of the New Deal is found in the words of Secretary Wallace who has stated that "agriculture must be adjusted to the market which actually exists," and "the wide disparity between the prices of the things the farmer sells and the things he buys must be corrected. The adjustment of agriculture to the market which "actually exists" is being accomplished by assisting the farmers toward production control.

Acreage Decreased.

Forty million acres brought into production as the result of the demands of the World War are being slowly taken from production by inducements which make it more profitable for the farmer to let the land lie idle than to attempt to till it. While these acres are being withdrawn from production, the recovery leaders are striving to develop the consuming powers on the home markets and those abroad.

Allegany to Aid Crippled Children

Committee Formed Under State League.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The Allegany County committee of the Maryland League for Crippled Children was formed yesterday at a meeting at the home of Miss Henrietta Schwarzenbach. The committee is composed of Miss Schwarzenbach, Thomas B. Finan, Morris Rosenbaum, William A. Gunter and Mrs. George W. Legge, of Cumberland; State Senator J. Glenn Beall and Mrs. James C. Cobey, Frostburg; Mrs. Lloyd B. Shaw, Lonaconing, and Mrs. W. Ralph Bretz, Mount Savage. Mrs. Bretz was named secretary and Mr. Finan, treasurer.

Miss Mary E. Church, Baltimore, executive secretary of the State organization, was present. More than 400 crippled children in Allegany County now receive aid from the league.

Senate Group Votes Raise In D. C. Fund

Federal Appropriation Put at $5,700,000; Other Items Increased.

A Federal appropriation of $5,700,000 was written into the annual District appropriations bill for next year by the Senate District Appropriations Committee yesterday.

Several millions were added to the total of the bill as it was passed by the House, new items were inserted and funds for others increased. Among items given committee approval was the supplemental recommendation of the Commissioners and the Budget Bureau for an increase of $1,700,000 for emergency relief next year.

The District Commissioners asked more than $1,300,000 in other items above the House figures, which totaled $32,650,000. Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, sub-committee chairman, refused to make public details of the bill pending approval by the full committee at an executive session this morning. The bill is expected to be reported to the Senate later in the day. He will press for prompt consideration on the floor, Senator Thomas said. He predicted the committee increases would meet with Senate approval.

Action of the sub-committee in raising the Federal appropriation to the $5,700,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau and the House District Appropriations Committee will precipitate a fight when the measure is sent back to that body, but members of the Senate committee were confident the House conferees would accept the raise. The House cut the amount down to $4,364,000. Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, and Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, arrived at that figure by deducting from the $5,700,000 they first recommended to the House the entire sum of an allotment given the District by the PWA for sewer construction.

Silver Bloc Bolt Threatened As Deadlock Is Unbroken

Threaten to Bolt.

To the last man, the silverites scorned the Morgentnau bill. They said it went back on Mr. Roosevelt's assurances. They threatened to bolt again. Unless he agreed to mandatory nationalization of silver and to a declaration of policy on the 75-25 gold-silver ratio, they told him they would go ahead on their own to put an entirely mandatory bill through Congress.

Idaho's Borah, already suspicious that the Administration was simply trying to outmaneuver the silverites in order to get rid of them, stalked out.

"What is being proposed is merely permissive legislation," he snorted, "and I don't want to have anything to do with it. I'd rather wait until the next session of Congress and discuss this whole proposition before the people to see if we can't force something direct and mandatory."

Elmer Thomas came out next, and was asked if headway was being made toward agreement on a bill.

"I can't see it," he remarked.

Several Drafts Studied.

Finally, Morgenthau and his aids trailed back to the Treasury carrying at least three separate proposed drafts of legislation. One embodying Thomas' ideas calls for continued silver buying at home and abroad until the price reaches $1.29 an ounce or 1926 price levels are restored. Each of the silverites seems to have his own ideas, and no two appear to be incomplete accord.

Senator Wheeler was absent from the day's parleys. He is as dissatisfied as Borah.

From what Mr. Roosevelt said after his talk with the silverites on Tuesday and at his press conference yesterday, he is "exploring" the two points of nationalization and a 25 per cent reserve, but will not be committed to any legislation until he sees it, and will not agree to mandatory silver buying.

Viewpoints Far Apart.

He is thinking in terms of an international monetary conference at which the leading nations would agree to make silver a part of their central bank reserves. The silverites are thinking in terms of getting higher prices for the metal and inflationary effects. Hence the two basic viewpoints are far apart.

The chances for inducing England, France and other nations to accept a 20 to 25 per cent silver backing for currency seem remote.

However, the President's chief advisers, including Prof. George F. Warren, have advocated international bimtalism as a solution of the present maldistribution of gold and to hasten return to some international monetary standard.

Silverites' Complaint.

For the United States to act alone in setting up a part silver base would be far different. It would involve vast buying of silver, and add infinite complications affecting gold, exchange stabilization and a return to an international standard.

The silverites complain that they have been put off too often by visions of international bimetalism which have never materialized. The Administration's answer is that the time never has been ripe until now.

The Treasury-senatorial debate is to continue. The odds are that after a few more conferences agreement will be reached on legislation that is permissive except for nationalization. Indications are that the President would accept this.

Clearspring Lets Water System Job

PWA to Pay 30 Per Cent of $17,089 Cost.

Clearspring, Md., May 9 (Spl.). The burgess and commissioners have awarded a contract for construction of the town's new water system to W. Harry Angle, whose bid was $17,089.90.

The people voted for a new system some months ago and the Public Works Administration will meet 30 per cent of the expense.

A decision to build a new water system came following an epidemic of typhoid fever two years ago, which was traced by the health department to pollution of cisterns and wells, the town's only source of water. Water will be obtained from a large spring near Fairview Mountain and piped to Clearspring.

West Virginia Christian Church Sessions Open

New Martinsville, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Following conferences of women's missionary and Sunday school workers, business sessions of the annual Christian Church State convention opened here today.

Speakers were the Rev. C. H. Mayhew, Parkersburg; the Rev. B. H. Belton, Charleston, and the Rev. Frederick Burnham, Richmond, Va., former president of the United Missionary Society of the denomination. A fellowship dinner was held tonight.

Goldsmith, 12 Others Indicted

Tax Act Violations Laid to Group in Illicit Liquor Drive.

Determined to wipe out the illicit liquor traffic in the District, the grand jury yesterday returned indictments charging 13 men and women with violations of the "liquor taxing act of 1934."

Chief among those named, in point of prominence, was Zachariah T. (Zebbie) Goldsmith, reputed to have been the operator of the exclusive Club Mayflower, on upper Connecticut avenue northwest. He and four others were arrested when police raided the Mayflower Club last February. The others, all of whom were named in the indictment, were William H. Nelson, Joseph S. Cochran, Thomas P. Sullivan and Robert H. Corzine.

Goldsmith, Cochran and Corzine were also indicted for permitting gaming. Police, led by Lieut. George Little, said they found coin slot machines in operation in the place. Entrance was gained by an undercover agent who alleged he had spent $13 on drinks and a pint of whisky.

were assigned to various projects as a precautionary measure.

Assembling at the old Federal building, the group of 500 marched on a street widening project three blocks away, stampeded the policemen assigned there and forced workmen to quit.

Moving on toward another project, the demonstrators encountered a stronger detail of police. Another clash occurred at a bridge over the Arkansas River.

When the firemen were brought into the fray McLean called upon the marchers to disperse. His order was quickly obeyed.

Annapolis, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The Harvard Club, of Annapolis, observed the twentieth anniversary of its founding at a banquet here and elected officers.

Prof. Frank E. LaCauza, 1923, instructer in electrical engineering at the Navy Postgraduate School, was chosen president to succeed Prof. Levi T. Wilson, and Prof. Paul Allen, jr., 1919, of the chemistry department, St. John's College, was elected secretary-treasurer.

'Macon' Fails in Fleet Test; 2 Warships Collide at Sea

Macon shows up better in her new tests with the fleet no more airships will be built by the United States.

"The Macon will undergo repairs and then will attempt to prove her efficiency with the fleet," said Mr. Swanson, adding he was by no means "sold" on dirigibles and had to be shown that their cost was justified.

High Navy authorities have been doubtful of the value of airships since the Akron, sister ship of the Macon, crashed last year and carried its crew to death in the Atlantic. The Navy had a similar tragic experience some years ago with the Shenandoah. The Los Angeles survived several years' strenuous flying, but now is stored away at Lakehurst, N. J., deemed too old to be safe for further use.

Despite the recommendation of Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval aeronautics, the Navy refused this year to authorize replacement of the Akron. The Akron disaster turned many Congressmen definitely against dirigibles and the Navy preferred to await trials with the Macon before determining future policies.

Old Fears Revived.

During construction of the Macon, there were repeated rumors of sabotage and structural weaknesses. The Navy accepted her after a thorough examination. Now the damages and other difficulties on the recent cross-country flight, plus the new troubles in the Caribbean, have caused considerable apprehension in some quarters.

Navy fliers who favor dirigibles contend they should be of great value in scouting work with the fleet. But their great bulk and comparative low speed make them a relatively easy target for attacking airplanes.

Mr. Swanson pointed out that in the judgment of war-game umpires the "Macon" was destroyed," although it carried machine guns and five airplanes of its own for protection.

Aside from the new reports on the Macon, Mr. Swanson disclosed that the light cruiser Milwaukee collided with the destroyer Simpson late Monday night. Because of the war-game censorship, Mr. Swanson was without details of the damage or possible casualties.

"We have no report whatever on the Milwaukee's damage. The Simpson, escorted by the destroyer tender Melville, is proceeding under its own steam to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for repairs, the Secretary said.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt left for New York, where he sails to join the fleet at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, to obtain a first-hand view of the situation.

He will board the cruiser Louisville, remaining in Southern waters until the Presidential review of the fleet in New York Harbor, May 31.

Maryland Klan Seeking Members

Two Crosses Burned and Advertising Started.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in the Tri-State area have initiated an advertising campaign to regain support of former members, members said last night.

Ordnance, Gun Prizes Awarded

Midshipmen Brockett and Blenman Get Honors.

Annapolis, Md., May 10 (Spl.).—Winners for two prizes for excellence in professional work, offered in annual competition to midshipmen of the senior class, were announced today by officials of the Naval Academy.

For proficiency in both practical and theoretical ordnance and gunnery, William A. Brockett, Niantuck, Conn., will receive the sword offered by the class of 1871, and for excellence in practical ordnance and gunnery Charles Blenman, jr., Tuscon, Ariz., will have his name inscribed on the cup presented by the general society, Sons of Revolution. This trophy is kept at the academy.

The Declaration of Independence

In Congress, July 4, 1776

[Unanimously adopted, July 4, 1776; signed by 54 delegates, August 2, 1776; by Thomas McKean, Delaware, in October and by Matthew Thornton, New Hampshire in November of that year.]

WHEN, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed, by their Creator, with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form as to them shall seem most likely to affect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate, that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience hath shewn that mankind are more disposed to suffer while evils are sufferable than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present king of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation, till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature—a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused, for a long time after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large, for their exercise, the state remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers, to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation.

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighbouring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies;

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering, fundamentally, the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation, and tyranny already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

WE, THEREFORE, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent States, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent States may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Fleet Reports Sudden Death Of Capt. Smyth

Tennessee's Commander Was Slated for High Budget Post Here.

Complete censorship of all fleet activities, imposed whenever Uncle Sam's sea fighters are playing at war, was broken for the first time since maneuvers were begun in the Caribbean last week to report to the Navy Department the death of Capt. William W. Smyth, commanding officer of the battleship Tennessee, from "natural causes" aboard the hospital ship Relief yesterday morning.

Awaiting Capt. Smyth's return with the fleet for review by President Roosevelt at New York May 31, were his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Fraser Smyth, and his son, William Woods Smyth, jr., at the Hotel Wellington in Philadelphia.

Because of unusual qualifications for the post, Capt. Smyth was slated to relieve Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch as the Navy's budget officer next month, Secretary Swanson said.

Capt. Smyth was born in Marion, Iowa, October 5, 1897. More than eight years of his naval career were spent in Washington. He reported for sea duty as executive officer of the Powhatan from a detail at the Navy Yard here in 1917. He served in the Bureau of Ordnance from 1920 to 1922, and for three years was secretary of the general board at the Navy Department. From 1930 until he was ordered to command the Tennessee in 1932, he was assistant chief of the Ordnance Bureau.

Mrs. Marsh, 100, Dies at Norfolk

1 of 3 Women in Vicinity to Reach Century.

Norfolk, Va., May 9 (AP).—Mrs. Eunice Hyde Marsh, who was 100 years old on February 28, died of pneumonia today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. I. G. West, at Virginia Beach. She was one of three women in Norfolk and vicinity who had reached the century milepost.

Mrs. Marsh was born in Norwich, Conn., in 1834. After completion of her private schooling she visited in Natchez, Miss., where she met Cyrus Marsh, of New York, whom she married.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. I. G. West and Mrs. May Foster, both of Virginia Beach, and two sons, Capt. James Hyde Marsh, of Natchez, Miss., and Burrell Hyde Marsh, of Greensboro, N. C., 12 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Work on Woodstock's School to Start Soon

Woodstock, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—With the awarding of the general contract to the Neilson Construction Co., of Harrisonburg, work on Woodstock's $60,000 14-room high school building will start soon. Excavation was completed recently with CWA funds.

Construction was made possible by the Shenandoah County board of supervisors, who appropriated an additional $5,432 necessary to meet the lowest bids when the initial sum of $57,747 was found inadequate. D. C. Bowman, also of Harrisonburg, was granted the general plumbing contract.

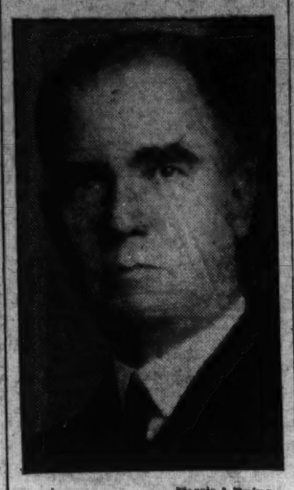
Navy Hero Dies



Harris & Ewing.

Hospital Election Set.

Winchester, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—The board of directors of Winchester Memorial Hospital will elect officers May 15, it was announced today by Dr. Hunter H. McGuire, Winchester, president.

Vanguard of Fleet Arrives in Norfolk, But Comes by Land

Norfolk, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Ten Navy trucks, first contingent of the United States fleet to reach this coast arrived today from San Diego. They were 16 days making the run across the continent.

They represent the land auxiliary of the fleet air detachment and were under the command of Lieut. Charles W. Fox. There were 40 enlisted men with the caravan and the families of three of the men also came along. Other families arrived in automobiles.

The caravan was met at the Campostello Bridge by motorcycle police and escorted to the naval base. Lieut. Fox said the trip was made without accident.

Norfolk to Get New Ship Service

Norfolk, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—The Standard Fruit Co., which operates 24 ships in the fruit trade between West Indian, South American and American ports, today announced it would establish a service to Norfolk.

Headquarters of the line is in Boston.

The United Fruit Co., which for years controlled the fruit business here, has been unloading at Baltimore and shipping here by rail.

36 Bananas, 5 Bottles Of 'Pop' Is Man's Meal

Glade Spring, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Bill Walker, of Glade Spring, on a wager, ate 36 bananas and drank five bottles of "pop" at one meal.

At last reports he had felt no ill effects, aside from a few minor pains.

L. C. Morris Wins Share of Estate

Grandmother's Will Broken in Culpeper Suit.

Culpeper, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—A jury in Culpeper Circuit Court today returned a verdict in favor of Louis C. Morris, 32, in a suit to break the will of his grandmother, Mrs. Annie E. Morris, who died last October.

Under the verdict, Mrs. Morris' estate, appraised at about $20,000, will be divided equally between the plaintiff and his two uncles, Louis A. Morris and William G. Morris, both of Culpeper. The will had bequeathed the entire estate to the two uncles.

It was testified that the plaintiff, orphaned while a small boy, had been raised by his grandmother. The will was broken on the grounds of mental incompetence and undue influence in its drafting. The case was heard before Judge Alexander Browning, who refused a motion to set aside the verdict.

Richmond Mayor Shuns Loan Move

Harbor Plan Goes to U. S. Without Signature.

Richmond, May 9 (Spl.).—The resolution urging the Government to speed action on the proposed loan of $2,250,000 for completion of the deep water terminal and improvements to the city harbor will go to Washington without Mayor Bright's signature.

The mayor, who has had the resolution under consideration since it was unanimously approved by city council Monday night, will not veto the measure, but will allow it to become effective by failing to affix his signature, he said today.

The plan is for the Government to advance $2,250,000 and build the deep water terminal and harbor improvements. The Government would take over the revenues from the city harbor until loan is liquidated.

Blaze at Lynchburg Causes $3,000 Loss

Lynchburg, Va., May 9 (AP).—Six occupants were driven out of bed in their night clothing early today when fire threatened to destroy a house used as a double dwelling.

Firemen were unable to fix the cause of the fire. Occupants placed the loss at about $3,000.

Legion Women Meet Saturday in Culpeper

Culpeper, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—The Eighth District canference of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Virginia, will be held here Saturday. Mrs. Walter Gordon Trow, of Warrenton, district committeewoman, will preside, and Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, of Alexandria, alternate committeewoman, will be the secretary.

Delegates will be present from Alexandria, Arlington, Warrenton, Orange, Lorton, Quantico and Culpeper. Mrs. Jesse M. Yowell, of Culpeper, is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Roanoke Distillery Is Granted Charter

Old Nick Williams, Inc., to Be Revived.

Richmond, May 9 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today granted a charter to Old Nick Williams, Inc., distillers, before prohibition, of corn whisky.

In the "old days" the distillery operated in North Carolina. It proposes to reopen at Roanoke.

The corporation has a maximum capitalization of $100,000 and a minimum of $10,000. Nicholas Glen Williams, jr., of Roanoke; E. A. Williams, of Winston-Salem, and Z. Vance Williams, of Lewisville, N. C., are officers.

Liquor Raid Leads To Theft Charges

Woman Declares Officer Took Shoes, Blankets.

Norfolk, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Mrs. W. W. Knowles, of Camden County, N. C., has sworn out a warrant against Marion A. King, internal revenue deputy collector here, charging him with petty larceny, according to a dispatch from Elizabeth City.

King, Mrs. Knowles charges, entered her home May 3 on a liquor raid and carried away blankets and a pair of shoes belonging to her.

"It's news to me," King stated today. "I have plenty of blankets, and don't wear women's shoes."

King did recall, however, visiting the premises occupied by Mrs. Knowles and finding 250 gallons of whisky.

Silk Plant Leases Clifton Forge Mill

Clifton Forge, Va., May 9 (Spl.). Harris Bros. Silk Co., of New York and Paterson, N. J., yesterday took a three-year lease, with option to purchase, property near this city formerly occupied by J. Thuma & Co., furniture plant. A ribbon factory will be started at once.

Negotiations were carried on by Samuel M. Sachs, president of the local Chamber of Commerce, for several months.

Here's why-Luckies do not dry out

why-Luckies are All-Ways kind to your throat

The difference between cigarettes is the difference between what goes into them and how they are put together.

Luckies use only the clean, center leaves, for these are the mildest leaves—they taste better. That's why farmers are paid higher prices for them. And Luckies get the benefit of the famous process—"It's toasted"—for your throat protection.

And every Lucky is round, firm and fully packed. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—that's why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker.

Yes, Luckies are always in all-ways kind to your throat.

Politicians Preferred.

Evidently upon the assumption that so important a post as director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, to which agency thousands of business men turn annually for unbiased advice and assistance, should be a nonpolitical office, President Roosevelt last August nominated Willard L. Thorp for the post. The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday voted an unfavorable report on the nomination, despite the fact that Secretary of Commerce Roper made a personal appearance to ask confirmation. The President has now withdrawn Dr. Thorp's name and he will step out, presumably to be replaced by a Democrat more acceptable to Chairman Stephens, of the Senate committee.

The antagonism toward Dr. Thorp appears to be almost entirely political. He is "accused" of being a Republican. A memorandum issued by the so-called "Democratic Protective Committee," whose membership is unknown, gives the clue to the refusal to confirm Dr. Thorp's nomination. It says: "Is he a brilliant young Democrat, adding luster to the party's achievements, or is his position to be used to strengthen the stricken forces of the Republicans? The answer is that as a Democrat he is a liability, and a distinct asset to the Republicans."

Injection of politics into this case is particularly unfortunate inasmuch as Dr. Thorp himself is no politician. He is a former professor of economics at Amherst College and member of the research staff of the National Bureau of Economic Research. After months had been spent in trying to find some one for the position, he was chosen as a man ideally suited to its specialized tasks.

Dr. Thorp has given good service since he accepted the post despite Senator Stephens' assertion that he has not had enough "practical" experience. It is quite obvious that the Commerce Committee is less interested in having a director with experience, than in having a "deserving Democrat" in the place. In making it impossible for President Roosevelt's nominee to hold this job, the committee has revealed that even in an administration directed by a "brain trust" some professors are not wanted. Too frequently it is politics, not brains, that count.

Closing The Silk Mills.

The announcement of a complete shutdown of silk mills for a period of one week, beginning May 14, has been received with enthusiasm by the manufacturers. Representatives of labor, on the other hand, are reported to be extremely antagonistic to the proposal and suggest that, instead of suspending operations, the mills ought to increase employment by the introduction of a shorter working week. Since the industry is already suffering from serious overproduction which has resulted in price declines and sales below production costs, it is evident that the required adjustments can not be made by following labor's advice.

Undoubtedly a general suspension of operations for a definite period has the advantage of spreading unemployment more evenly over a wider area, and it helps to protect workers against outright dismissal. Consequently there is much to be said in favor of the procedure from the point of view of the working man, even though organized labor is denouncing it. Apart from these considerations, the fact that the code authority has approved the suspension order is of great importance. About 900 mills and 30,000 employes are said to be affected by the curtailment. Large numbers of workers have already been dropped by individual mills and further reductions were in prospect had it not been for the suspension.

It appears from the character of their comment that the silk manufacturers regard this general closing as a form of production control that will help to strengthen prices. It is hard to see how general suspension per se can improve market conditions more effectively than the familiar method of leaving the decision to individual mills as orders decline. However, the universality of the arrangement offers some protection against the competition of mills that might continue to produce if left to their individual discretion. As a matter of fact the chairman of the code authority has issued a warning that the present curtailment may not permanently relieve the situation. He predicts a succession of shutdowns unless market conditions improve.

It will be interesting to follow the course of this experiment in systematic suspension of operations, because it offers much material for speculation concerning the future of industrial adjustments under code organization. Concerted shutdowns will not eliminate the losses due to mistakes and unforeseen declines in demand, but they will distribute such losses more evenly than is possible under the familiar methods of permitting individual concerns to adjust their production schedules in accordance with their independent judgment.

The Silver Compromise.

The latest proposal to "nationalize" silver and to commit the Government to a policy of increasing the silver base of the currency to 25 per cent of total metallic reserves has not been formally indorsed by the President, but it is reported to have his approval in principle. As an alternative to mandatory purchases of silver in world markets, the present plan has the advantage of permitting such purchases to be made at discretion, with compulsory buying restricted to domestic supplies. A mere declaration of policy would not compel the President to make huge silver purchases in order to raise existing silver reserves to the contemplated 25 per cent.

Nevertheless, the policy of making concessions to foes of sound money is a dangerous habit which tends to destroy confidence in our monetary system. Although this disposition to compromise and thus avoid a decisive battle with the advocates of inflationary proposals has been defended on the alleged ground that it prevented mandatory greenback legislation, it has resulted in monetary experiments with gold that have been highly disturbing. In fact, the outcome of the opportunistic gold buying and devaluation program is still undetermined.

Just as the business and financial world is beginning to hope that further experimentation has been ruled out, the machinations of the silver bloc create renewed alarms for the future of the dollar. Such fears are well-founded because it is certain that a modest subsidy would not satisfy the silver interests. As experience has shown, it merely whets their appetites. The bonuses paid for new domestic silver did not still the clamor. And there is no reason to expect that the profits accruing to silver speculators under the proposal to take over free domestic stocks at a premium above prevailing market prices would be any more efficacious in pacifying the Congressional silver bloc and the interests it represents.

The latest plan would simply add about 250,000,000 ounces of superfluous silver to our already superabundant metallic monetary reserves. It is virtually certain that these domestic purchases would only be a prelude to insistent demands that the Government use its permissive powers to buy silver in world markets in order to carry out the more ambitious declaration of policy. Acquisition of the amounts of silver needed to attain the 25 per cent ratio would involve the purchase, in all probability, of several billion ounces. The amount, of course, would depend upon the price that had to be paid and variations in the amount of gold on hand.

Government issues of silver certificates or credits in other forms to finance the purchase of silver would add to the already swollen volume of excess bank reserves, which now stand at approximately $1,500,000,000. Thus, whether the amounts of such purchases were large or small, the buying program would have a demoralizing effect upon public sentiment by aggravating existing abnormal credit and currency conditions created by previous monetary experiments.

Without international agreements of a comprehensive character, there is no possibility of remonetizing silver on a workable basis and there is no need for it in any case. Those who predict a millennium from the injection of vast quantities of silver into our monetary reserves are sure to be disappointed, but the country can not afford to indulge in a rash experiment to prove the specious nature of their arguments. The effective way to dispose of the silver agitation is to resist it, instead of retreating by degrees.

Education For Business.

Dr. B. M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank, recently made a valuable contribution to the perennial academic discussion concerning the merits of practical training versus cultural courses. As Dr. Anderson was addressing the School of Business of Columbia University, his contempt for the narrow practicality which causes students to apply a "cash value" test to the instruction offered them is decidedly arresting. A school of business, quite as much as a college of liberal arts, should, in his opinion, subordinate details to an understanding of principles. "If the institutions of learning will send to the business and banking world men with good general education, with eager and inquiring minds, and with an understanding of principles," he says, "the business and banking community will quickly teach them the particular jobs assigned to them."

There is, in fact, no fundamental conflict between theory and practice. A banker, a business man or a member of the learned professions is better equipped to take up the specific work that awaits him if he has been trained to think and if he has acquired a knowledge of history which sharpens his critical faculties and enables him to test present practices by past performances. The immature student whose mind is crammed with undigested facts and filled with accounts of technical processes—which may be outmoded before he receives his degree—enters the world with none of these enduring aids to successful achievement.

That is why Dr. Anderson thinks that a collegiate school of business ought to give its students a liberal education which will compare favorably in general cultural value with any other college course. The philosophy of business, the theory of economics, the history of economic thought have a positive cultural value, because they enable a man to look beyond his special problems and see them in relation to a larger field of knowledge and activity. There is, of course, a place for "practical" courses that offer guidance to those who want such training, but the general student seeking to acquire preliminary preparation for his life's work would not be "educated" by this kind of specialized instruction.

The complex problems of the present day business and banking world have demonstrated most decisively the limitations of the trained specialist and the severely practical man of affairs. We need more men in business who are able to look beyond the immediate results of present policies and test them by the basic principles that persist amidst the rapidly changing methods of the practical world.

Increasing Traffic Hazards.

A few years ago Washington had an excellent rating among the large cities of the United States in the matter of traffic safety. With the number of critical accidents mounting rapidly in recent months, the Capital City appears to have lost its standing. It is time to inquire into the reasons why, on the average, one person is injured every two hours and one killed every two and a half days in local traffic mishaps.

Officials are at a loss to explain this sudden increase of traffic fatalities. It does not appear that repeal of prohibition has been a major factor. Traffic Director Van Duzer suggests that many accidents are caused by "dumb drivers and dumb pedestrians." But that does not dispose of the issue in any respect. Why is there so much carelessness on the part of drivers and pedestrians in Washington?

Some individuals are physically or mentally incapable of becoming safe drivers. Defects of vision and lack of coordination between mental and muscular processes are doubtless responsible for a considerable number of accidents. Obviously, individuals who are thus handicapped should be denied drivers' permits. Mr. Van Duzer admits that the examination of drivers is superficial because his department lacks funds. So long as this condition exists driving or walking in Washington will continue to be hazardous. It is absurd to expose the public to the menace of incompetent driving on grounds of economy.

Moreover, a large number of accidents are due to simple negligence, and negligence is frequently a result of lax enforcement of the law. If a larger number of motorists were arrested for ignoring red lights and stop signs, for encroaching upon the pedestrian's right of way, for excessive speed and reckless driving there would be less carelessness in handling automobiles.

More than three-fourths of the people killed by automobiles in the District last year were pedestrians. Obviously, the biggest problem is to keep people on foot out of the traffic lanes when cars are in motion. Under the law pedestrians are subject to traffic signals as well as motorists. But this section of the traffic act is almost completely ignored by the walking public and by the police. It would be impossible for the police to direct all pedestrians across the streets, but control of foot traffic in the downtown areas would doubtless prevent many accidents as well as impress the public with the dangers of jay-walking. Washington's broad streets make pedestrian control imperative to safety.

It is futile, of course, to seek a panacea for the traffic problem. No single remedy can eliminate these complex hazards. But a tightening up of the rules for granting and revoking licenses, more persistent and effective enforcement of the traffic regulations and control of pedestrians should make a substantial contribution to the safety of our streets. The sudden increase of casualties during recent months demands attention from many angles. Difficult though the task may be, traffic officials will be held responsible for a correct diagnosis and for the application of every practical corrective measure.

Unfriendly Competition.

Cuba, its sugar industry having crashed, is going in for commerce of a more modern type. According to an Associated Press dispatch, the island republic will liberalize its marital laws and enter the international divorce field.

Heretofore, Cuban statutes have been rather strait-laced in the matter of marriage abrogation. At present, they sanction that sort of thing only in cases of adultery, repeated and habitual cruelty, conviction of either husband or wife upon charges of felony, habitual drunkenness, desertion for more than two years, and nonsupport. Those grounds it is now proposed extensively to enlarge.

World peace, no less than domestic stability, may be jeopardized by this move. In these days, when every penny of revenue counts, France, Mexico and certain of the Baltic States are sure to feel the competition. And can it be regarded as entirely friendly by our own United States? There is such a thing as going too far in lowering divorce barriers. The Senators from Nevada should insist that our State Department lodge a firm protest against any new attack upon this home industry.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

REPRESENTATIVE GEORGE E. GORMAN, of Illinois, said: "If a young man asks my advice about entering the Government service I tell him to stay on the farm, or anywhere else, where he will have a chance to do things." Acceptance of a Government position in Washington inoculates one with "a virus fatal to ambition and initiative," he said.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE HOUSE, by a vote of 191 to 171, refused to accept the conference report on the immigration bill containing President Coolidge's suggestion for postponement of Japanese exclusion until March 1, 1925, and recommitted the report, with instruction to the conferees to eliminate the stipulation written into the bill by the conferees.

FEARING TRANSPORTATION of the famous Greek statue of Hermes holding a child would result in its being broken, the American Association of Museum Directors, in session at the Corcoran Art Gallery, went on record as opposing the proposal to bring the piece to this country as a demonstration of the gratitude of Greece for aid given it by America.

Mother's Day Stamp.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept the keen appreciation of the art lovers of our D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs for the editorial regarding the beloved, symbolic portrait of Whistler's Mother, appearing as it does, on the new Mother's Day stamps. If Whistler's own words regarding that portrait, which embodied his highest ideal of life, love and devotion, had been studied, I doubt if any profane hand would have so mutilated this famous masterpiece by our greatest artist, Whistler, to commemorate our sacred Mother's Day.

Post's Dramatic Department.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While others are extolling the economic, political and financial departments of The Post, may I beg the indulgence of your columns long enough to express the appreciation of myself and many of my friends of the consistent excellence of The Post's dramatic comments and criticisms appearing under the signature of Nelson B. Bell?

It is only necessary to read the local press a comparatively short time to become aware of the superior background in the theater that is possessed by The Post's dramatic department.

There are probably many others who rely upon the columns of your paper for guidance in their choice of theatrical entertainment who would wish to join in this word of appreciation.

Correcting an Inconsistency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My letter relating to the Federal corporation tax which was printed in The Post of April 15, applied the figures to million dollar units. In printing the letter, these were in some cases broken down to dollar units and in other cases were broken down to "grands," to use the slang of the day, which destroyed the consistency required for comparison and contrast.

For 1919, corporate business of $99,918,000,000 paid $2,175,000,000 in Federal taxes, including excess profits taxes; for 1922 corporate business of $100,920,000,000 paid $783,700,000, in taxes; and for 1931 corporate business of $105,238,000,000 paid $392,800,000 in taxes.

In 1929, corporate business reached the peak of $160,621,000,000 and paid $1,193,436,000 in taxes. Upon the 1929 base, the 1931 figure represent a slump of 34 per cent in corporate business with a slump of 67 per cent in corporate taxes. In 1916 corporate business of $35,327,000,000 produced $8,767,000,000 of taxable profits. In 1932, upon the basis of preliminary statistics, corporate business of $65,651,000,000 produced but $1,815,000,000 of taxable profits. This result reflects the perfection of the art of writing off operating profits against the Government, in the form of deductions for salaries, interest and depreciation.

The public debt has increased over $15,000,000,000 since June 30, 1929, which means an accumulation of $3,000,000,000 a year for five years, making a deficit at the rate of $10,000,000 a day for 300 business days in each year.

On June 30, 1934, it is announced the public debt will stand at $32,000,000,000. Present indications are that the tax revenue for the fiscal year will not run beyond $2,600,000,000. It is a moral certainty that by the ides of November, 50 cents in every 100 cents of the Federal tax revenue will be absorbed by interest on the public debt. No beer-brained double budgeting can conceal this fact.

As Others See It.

The Mellon Case.

Citizens are still entitled to the presumption of innocence and they ought not to be dragged into criminal proceedings casually or frivolously. And, even in these New Deal days, multimillionaires may be citizens and entitled to a citizen's rights. For a decade Mr. Mellon was the most overrated man in the United States. He was not the greatest Secretary of the Treasury or anywhere near the greatest. He ought not to have been Secretary of the Treasury; no man of his financial and business relations should hold that office. But the swing of the political pendulum away from Mellonism is not to be taken as an excuse for persecution or anything that savors of persecution. Mr. Mellon was not a demigod and he is not now a demon.—Baltimore Sun.

It is everlastingly to the credit of the Pittsburgh grand jury, composed of clerks and laborers, that after hearing the evidence they kicked the indictment out the window. Mr. Mellon is one of the most respected citizens of his community and a local jury would hardly view favorably such petty persecution. But the episode is a heartening one, none the less. It shows that the rank and file of Americans bitterly resent such strong-arm tactics.

The country will be loath to believe that the President approves these exhibitions of rancor. Yet the evidence is mounting that parallel with the lofty professions of the New Deal run maneuvers of personal spite that reach a new low level of meanness. The policy of smearing what is distinguished in America, without hearing, without trial, by the say-so of a commissar, can doubtless be left to the American sense of fair play to judge and reject. But in any impartial review of the motives and purposes of the Roosevelt Administration the policy can not be ignored. Why does an Administration which constantly asserts its Americanism use methods which violate the basic principles of American civil rights and liberty.—New York Herald Tribune.

Refusal of the grand jury at Pittsburgh to indict former Secretary Mellon for tax evasion will, it is hoped, make an end of a bad practice started by the Department of Justice. Attorney General Cummings received the news with rather ill grace. True, he kindly admitted that he did not propose to go any further with the criminal proceedings against Mr. Mellon. He did not challenge the sincerity or competence of the grand jury. But he added the quite unnecessary remark:

"Very few people, I imagine, were seriously misled by Mr. Mellon's statements, which were evidently timed so as to be current while the grand jury had his case under consideration. There is no reason, however, to believe that these highly improper assertions affected the result."

What were these highly improper assertions? Simply that Mr. Mellon's income tax returns for 1931 had been properly drawn and had been accepted as satisfactory by the Internal Revenue experts; that, even if a mistake or fraudulent entry were suspected, Mr. Mellon had by law the right to go to the Board of Appeals to have the matter threshed out and settled; but that by announcing beforehand, with a kind of flourish, that a criminal indictment of Mr. Mellon was to be sought along with one against former Mayor Walker, a gross injustice had been done.—New York Times.

The politically minded Cummings has failed in his raid, which is well, because if he had succeeded with Mellon he could have cited any political enemy into court upon the slightest provocation. In brief, as Mr. Mellon has said, "if there is such a Federal tax policy as the Attorney General has announced, it is nothing more than an attempt to regularize a campaign of terrorism, with the tax laws as the weapon."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

So far as we are informed, however, Mr. Mellon's honesty has never been questioned. He served as Secretary of the Treasury under three Presidents. In the administration of one of them graft and corruption were rife. But the finger of suspicion was never pointed at Mr. Mellon He came out of the whole mess with clean skirts.

No doubt, the grand jury investigation was the proper course to pursue in the interest of all parties concerned. Idle tongues were wagging. Gossipers were putting the Government on the spot for inaction. The situation must have been very unpleasant to Mr. Mellon.

Presumably, the case now is closed. A cross-section of the public is always inclined to be skeptical, but the fairer group of Americans, we believe, will accept the "not-a-true-bill" report as the proper finding in this case.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

G. O. P. Principles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Grand Old Party which freed the slaves, reunited the Nation, revitalized the Constitution and set the Nation on the road to prosperity, is now but a looker-on at the progress of political events, idly standing at the crossroads, seeking for a constructive issue and new leadership. There has been no such debacle of a great political party in recent history, except possibly the sudden elimination of the Whig party in America and the Liberal party in England.

The Republican party derived its greatness from two fundamental issues, one human and the other material. Equality of rights without regard to any other consideration than that of citizenship, and the protective tariff have constituted the vital principles of the party faith. But alas, the Grand Old Party has proved apostate to the one, and the industrial development and economic demands of the times have outmoded the other. It is a universal principle that any organization which repudiates the vital principle upon which it was founded has outlived its usefulness. Its only hope of salvation is to return to first principles. KELLY MILLER.

The Post Impressionist

Who Reads His Mail?

Postoffice, Thursday.

YOU still hear occasional complaints that letter-writing is a lost art; but they grow fainter and more feeble with the increasing realization that it is an art which is now lost beyond revival. Our own whimper is slightly different. We do not so much lament the fact that nobody writes a good letter any more; we grieve that nobody reads letters, good or bad.

You must have noticed that nobody does—unless you are one of those busily unoccupied people who conduct their large correspondence by telegraph and telephone. It has become practically impossible to secure an adequate answer to any question asked by mail. Recipients assume the contents of a letter, reply accordingly—and always erroneously.

What will any businessman tell you is the first thing he does upon reaching his office of a morning—before his brain has resumed its working tone? Won't he tell you that he "looks over the mail?" Well, "looks over" is the right phrase: he scarcely "glances at." Then he pushes the buzzer and dictates entirely random replies—"cleans up" his "correspondence" in 30 minutes.

Senators and Congressmen are no better, nowadays. The only M. C. we ever knew who really read the letters his constituents sent him was the later William E. Greist, of Pennsylvania, and he was reelected whenever he wanted to be. Even the most conscientious of our contemporary law-makers merely ask their secretaries what their letters "are about"—the secretaries having previously asked the stenographers—which accounts for a continual flow of new faces into the Capital.

You might think that authors, having a weakness for writing, would read their mail. They don't. All that an author wants to know about a letter is whether it is from a publisher and, if so, whether it contains a rejection-slip or a check. And neither of these needs much reading.

Being a married man, we shall not say that an absent wife's interest in her husband's missives partakes of the literary man's mental habit with his correspondence. But it will be safe to admit that the stay-at-home husband assumes his wife's letter to be composed of inquiries as to whether he has paid the rent and reduced the milk-order.

Is all this due to past weariness engendered by bad handwriting? Not in the ordinary matters of life. The French Ministry of Foreign Affairs still writes by hand, and as illegibly as ever. An ancient Norman legend tells of a Frenchman who even had a decipherable signature, but he was suspected of treason and executed. No, handwriting can't have much to do with the evil, because, in our times, 97.1 per cent of the business-letters, 62.2 of the personal, are typed.

To be sure, some Prominent Persons are letter-reading shy through their exaggerated idea of their prominence. They fear that, if they read letters, they may be seduced into some reply which will have value for the autograph-collector. The little boy in Maine who writes to Admiral Byrd at the South Pole, to ask how best to become an explorer, receives a form reply from the agent in Washington who represents the Admiral's business-backers. Rudyard Kipling once ceased paying tradesmen by check because he thought they were selling his checks, in excess of their face-value, to the autograph-insane.

But we do not believe that such tender sensibilities count among the weighty reasons why letters are unread.

After all, there must be a link between the elder disease of correspondence and its newer ill. Probably most people refuse to read the contents of an envelope because sad experience has taught them that the contents are generally not worth reading.

When Mr. A.'s secretary writes you that Mr. A. asks her to say, well, anything—aren't you sure that, if Mr. A. really felt it was worth saying, he would speak for himself?

When Mr. B.'s letter terminates with the polite information that it has been "dictated, but not read" by him—don't you declare that it will never be read by you, either?

Can the C. Company's communication be considerable if it is signed "The C. Company, per D. E. F.?"

Does Congressman G. feel genuinely interested in the H. Corporation's reactions to the Fake-Antique Furniture Code, when those reactions are authenticated by the rubber-stamp facsimile of the corporation-president's signature?

The late Senator, and later U. S. Circuit Court Judge, William Squire Kenyon devoted a large part of each evening to a study of the letters he received. But we doubt if even he wasted too much time over those to which the mighty correspondent's name was forged by some imitative underling.

Aside from which, and far more effective than which, stand those two undeniable facts already herein dimly adumbrated—to wit, that:

(a) Letter-writing is indeed a hopelessly lost art; most letters are poor letters, not only as to the signature, but also in their text and texture, their composition, soul and body;

(b) And that few people are patient enough to peruse poor letters.

The sole exceptions to the poverty of modern correspondence, and the reading of it, are provided only by the cases of:

(1) Your own children's letters to you—never the letters of other people's children to anybody;

And (2) love-letters—but only those you write and those you receive, because, as Voltaire long ago remarked, a love-letter ought properly to be about nothing at all.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

ONE of the anomalies of the New Deal is the generally accepted distinction between Secretary Wallace and his assistant, Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell. The latter, in the minds of critical editorial writers, is a Bolshevik, a revolutionary, a socialist or whatnot, one who would discard our institutions as being of no importance. The Secretary, on the other hand, is a mild, unassuming, very intelligent young man who views with abhorrence the authority that is being placed in his hands.

BARGERON.

He "abhorred" particularly, we are told, when the Bankhead bill regimenting the cotton farmers was passed. Indeed, he had an effusion of abhorrence then, having ordinarily "abhorred" at many of the other agricultural steps.

* * * *

He must be abhorring all over the place just now because of the pending clarification bill as it is called. It is a bill, it seems, that has come to cause abhorrence among most all of the Republicans and some of the Democrats. It is amazing that such an abhorrent measure can get so far, and what is more it will probably pass after there has been such an outburst of abhorrence as we do not usually see.

This abhorrent little piece has been around for sometime, but just now it is coming to light. Apparently the Democratic leaders had planned to slip it through but now it is to move more slowly in order that we can all abhor.

One recalls that periodically over the past few months, the leaders in discussing what legislation would be passed have always included the agricultural clarification bill in the list—oh, just a little bill clarifying some of the agricultural acts.

It turns out to be quite a little clarifier, indeed. In fact, if it is passed there will be no uncertainty as to the agricultural Secretary's authority at all. Clarified, this authority undoubtedly will be. There will be little doubt then that everybody dealing in agricultural products, with the exception of the consumer, will be completely under Mr. Wallace's thumb. Undoubtedly it will be possible then to apply those ideas which have been attributed to the professor and which have been held up because of lack of authority and not because of the Secretary's abhorrence, as many had assumed.

* * * *

I am sure, though, that he will abhor even as they are being applied. He is, for that matter, abhorring now as he stresses before the Senate committee and among the senators privately the need of the bill. Without this clarification, says he, the agricultural acts cannot be made effective.

It had been difficult for me to accept the generally accredited distinction between the two men, between the Secretary and the professor. The Secretary did make a very clear statement of our agricultural problem which attracted considerable praise while the professor prefers to talk in resonant phrases exalting the future. This is hardly what I would call a major distinction, though.

Yet it is a fact that while a good part of our citizenry and of Congress has had the professor on the pan, there has been a Presidential boom on for the Secretary. Two men associated in a common purpose, one a Secretary and the other his subordinate! And always speaking affectionately of each other, too. Why, only a few days ago the Secretary, stopping short in a speech of abhorring, resented what he said was the way the words of his friend, Rex, were twisted. It was an additional abhorrence for the Secretary, so to speak.

It is plain, though, that there is a wide distinction between these two men, not a gulf, but a difference. Notwithstanding that they are so closely associated, have a high regard for each other, there is a mark by which one may be distinguished from the other.

One abhors the authority he gets, the other makes no bones about wanting it. Between the two they get the authority.

Retired Prison Evangelist Dies

Rev. Minor J. Duryea, 80, Passes in Lynchburg.

Lynchburg, May 9 (AP).—The Rev. Minor J. Duryea, 80, former prison evangelist and a native of Michigan, who had made his home here three years, died yesterday.

He was assistant chaplain of the Michigan State Penitentiary a number of years and did much evangelistic work in West Virginia coal fields, Indian schools of Oklahoma and Federal prisons of Southern States.

He is survived by his widow, a son, Jasper Duryea, of Detroit, and a daughter, Mrs. William Eichelberger, of Cambria, Mich.

Walter D. Stinnett.

Lynchburg, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Walter D. Stinnett, 35, street-car operator, were conducted today and burial was in Spring Hill Cemetery. Mr. Stinnett was a native of Amherst County. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sadie Stinnett; his mother, Mrs. Ada Stinentt; the following children: Raymond, Ray, Frank, William, Helen and Ruth Stinnett; two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Colomore and Mrs. R. T. Everett, and a brother, J. M. Stinnett, of this city.

Mrs. Fannie Burner.

Luray, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Mrs. Fannie Sours Burner, 64, of Overall, Page County, died yesterday in her sleep. Grief over the death of her husband a few weeks ago and the deaths of a daughter and brother, prior to that, is said to have hastened her death, due to heart trouble. She is survived by several children, all of Page County, except Raymond Burner, of Westernport, Md.

Mrs. Mary Edwards.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Mrs. Mary Edwards, widow of John Emmanuel Edwards, died yesterday at a hospital in Tarrytown, N. Y. The body will be interred here tomorrow in the family lot in Rose Hill Cemetery, following services in Emmanuel Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Grace Shoemaker.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Mrs. Grace C. Shoemaker, wife of Dr. G. Guy Shoemaker, died yesterday after an illness of several months. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Cook, deceased, Ellesrslie, Md. She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. J. S. Devore, Ellersiie; Mrs. F. O. Bailey, Harrisburg, Pa., and Mrs. E. H. Foreman, Chicago. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Women Hear 5-Point Plan To Cut Crime

Speaker Urges Sterilization for Criminals of Hardened Type.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—A five-point program to lessen crime was advocated before the State Federation of Women's Clubs here today by Mrs. William B. Snyder, of Shepherdstown, formerly a member of the parole board of the Moundsville State Penitentiary. The plan comprised a Federal police system, probation, employment, segregation and sterilization of convicts, with segregation and sterilization for the hardened type.

Support given by the General Federation of Women's Clubs has prompted motion picture companies to produce an improved type of picture, although risque films draw better, Arthur Debra, of New York City, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, told the delegates.

Junior clubs have doubled in membership throughout the State since the last year to a total of more than 1,000, Mrs. T. E. N. Steele, State junior president, reported, with new clubs established at Martinsburg, Elkins, Glenville, Follansbee, Weirton, Chester, Whitesville and Welch.

Federation prize awards were announced as follows: Short story, Miss Mable Ann West, Clarksburg; best poems, Miss Eva Hughes, St. Albans, and Mrs. R. A. Strong, Morgantown; best one-act play, Miss Eleanor Reed, Welch.

Armstrong Jones Funeral Conducted

Rites Held at Martinsburg for Falls Church Man.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Services were conducted at the home of a daughter here today for Armstrong Jones, 54, a former Berkeley County farmer and cattle raiser, but for the last year living at Falls Church, Va., who died Monday. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Surviving are his wife, three daughters, Mrs. G. W. Whitehair, this city; Mrs. George Kerr and Miss Dorothy L. Jones, and a son, Billy Jones, all of Morgantown, W. Va.; three sisters, Mrs. William Rush, Jefferson County; Miss Sallie Jones, Washington, and Miss Minnie Jones, Shepherdstown, W. Va., and two brothers, Butler and Charles Jones, Shepherdstown, W. Va.

Final Rites Held For W. H. Ponton

Charlottesville, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—William H. Ponton, Confederate veteran, who died yesterday at the home of his niece, Mrs. O. M. Wood, after a brief illness, was buried today. He was a native of Nelson County and celebrated his ninetieth birthday last January 11.

Mr. Ponton married Miss Sarah Burvis, of Nelson County. Three grandchildren survive, Miss C. E. Ponton and Mrs. R. T. Dosler, of this city, and Mrs. L. W. Wells, of Lynchburg.

The funeral was conducted by the Rev. W. Roy Mason, chaplain of John Bowie Strange Camp. Interment was in Oakwood, services in charge of Masonic Lodge No. 55.

Washington County Bans Liquor on Election Days

Hagerstown, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—No intoxicating drinks may be sold on election day in Washington County, the Board of License Commisioners has ruled.

The board ruled that no beer, liquor or wines may be sold on the days of any regular, special or primary election. This includes municipal elections in any of the towns, the board said.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

MR. FARLEY AND A PAINTING.

("Artists' associations are condemning Postmaster General Farley for disfiguring Whistler's 'Mother' in its reproduction on the new three-cent stamp."—News item.)

Bureau of Engraving Artist—I'm afraid, Mr. Farley, we won't have room for all of Whistler's "Mother" on this new stamp.

Mr. Farley—You talk as if she was Kate Smith; what's the matter?

Artist—We just can't get her all on the stamp effectively.

Mr. Farley—We've got to get her on somehow. What would the Republicans say if after all this talk about putting Whistler's "Mother" on a new stamp I didn't do it?

Artist—It's going to be difficult, sir.

Mr. Farley—I don't understand it. You put generals and battles and ships on stamps; why can't you put a mother on?

Artist—We can get the mother on the stamp, but we can't reproduce all the details of the painting.

Mr. Farley—What else has Whistler got in this picture besides his mother?

Mr. Farley—That's nothing. From the way you talked I thought the old girl must be surrounded by grand pianos, radio cabinets and maybe a lot of bridge players. If all you're worrying about is cutting out a few draperies and a foot rest, it's a cinch. We had a design for a stamp once showing the Battle of Gettysburg or something and we had to cut out 20,000 or 30,000 soldiers and 10,000 head of horses. And you're fretting over some draperies!

Artist—I'm merely asking your approval.

Artist—Will it be all right to cut out the foot rest and Mrs. Whistler's feet, if necessary?

Mr. Farley—What you do about her feet is your problem. I'm the Postmaster General, not a chiropodist.

Artist—Very well, sir, but I'm warning you, there will be criticism.

Mr. Farley—Criticism? Say, after those air mail cancellations anything else will seem trivial.

D. C. Girl, 3 Others Hurt in Auto Crash

Danville, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Miss Ray Oden, 19, Washington, D. C., was one of four young people admitted early today to Danville Hospital following a motor accident near Ruffin, N. C., when their automobile left the road and turned over thrice. She had lacerations.

Miss Winifred Lea, of Danville, was less seriously hurt. Dewey Morris, Danville, driver of the car, was cut and bruised, while Leonard Adkins, of Danville, was regarded in critical condition with a fractured skull.

VERA Director Unable To Epand Relief Work

Richmond, May 9 (AP).—Answering a specific complaint, William A. Smith, Virginia Emergency Relief Administration director, said today that his organization was powerless to loosen any restrictions thrown around the employment of relief labor.

Engineers on the James River Bridge here and officials of the Richmond Department of Public Works had said that the abbreviated periods of employment laid down under VERA regulations made relief labor practically valueless.

Cold, Rains Hurt Maryland Fruit

Other Crops Also Suffer From Weather.

Annapolis, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County farmers, their planting greatly retarded by cold weather and frequent rains, have been working double time under ideal conditions the last few days.

A few truckers did some planting before the rough weather set in, but with poor results. Many others were caught in the midst of plowing, and tomatoes, peas and other early crops are getting a late start. In many instances farmers have curtailed planting and there will be a shortage in some crops.

Fruit growers already are counting their loss, particularly as to peaches and strawberries, both of which were damaged greatly by late frosts. The situation is especially severe on those who specialize in peaches, who still are suffering from the tropical storm of last August.

The National Gallery

ARNO BERTHOLD CAMMERER, director, National Parks Service; executive officer, National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Son of an itinerant preacher, he was born in a sod house at Arapaho, Nebr., 50 years ago. Lawyer and administrator. Educated in high schools of northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. Georgetown University, LL. B., 1911. Immediately entered Government service, Treasury Department, and went from cash room clerk to Assistant Secretary, 1904-1910. Member National Fine Arts Commission, 1910-1919. Drafted into National Park Service by former Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, 1919. Appointed to present post by Secretary Ickes last August. His primary aim is to provide parks for education and enjoyment of American people. Proud that he administrates largest park service in world, some 15,000,000 acres. Has been aggressive in District park development. Tall, powerfully built, has ruddy complexion and jovial manner. Exudes enthusiasm. A tireless worker, with few odd moments, but when he finds them he raises flowers to attract birds to his garden at Lyon Hurst, Va.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

General Makes Blunder; Privates Walk on Crutches

By Robert Quillen

In finance, as elsewhere, the sins of the fathers are visited on the children to the third and fourth generation.

Though economic skies have brightened and recovery is well on the way, nothing short of a miracle can relieve our people of the grievious burden imposed by folly and greed and dishonor.

Observe how tightly they are saddled.

A certain power company in the United States charges double the rate that proves adequate in Canada.

When patrons complain, officials answer truthfully that such a rate is necessary to pay dividends on the company's stock.

If the company had been capitalized for no more than its worth, it could reduce the rates by half and prosper still.

But its stock is water. It sold $10 worth of stock for every dollar the business is worth.

Now it must make enough money to pay dividends on stock that represents nothing more valuable than blue sky.

But, you say, the company should be recapitalized at its true value and the watered stock squeezed out of it.

That sounds simple enough, but it can't be done without adding injustice to knavery. Much of the stock is owned by widows and orphans and old people who have no other source of income. There is no just way to rob them of their property.

Therefore John Doe, buyer of electric current, must pay an unfair rate in order that John Doe, owner of stock, may receive a fair return on his investment.

The thing is done and there's no way out. Your children and their children must pay too much for service because this generation paid a great price for nothing.

Power companies were not the only offenders. The lust for easy money corrupted thousands. And now all alike must rob innocent Peter to pay sucker Paul.

What is true of stocks is equally true of bonds. Government obligations can not be repudiated without robbing millions of their savings.

Wherefore John Doe, the taxpayer, must be stripped in order to pay John Doe, the bondholder, and no man now living will see the end of it.

Maryland Herring Catch Is Small

Prices Rise, Wages Fall in Oxford Area.

Oxford, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The herring catch in this section of the Eastern Shore has been disappointing and wages have dropped.

It is said, however, that fishermen who remained on the east side of Chesapeake Bay have fared better than those who went to the western shore, where herring usually run stronger. Catches are smaller than in previous years.

Prices have jumped, packers paying approximately twice what they were charged for herring last season. Herring are being bought from Indian River fishermen in Delaware and trucked to Eastern Shore packing houses.

One company manager stated this week his plant has cut 700,000 herring so far this season. The same house in other years cut from 200,000 to 300,000 a day. It is said, however, that the herring are excellent in size and quality and the demand is encouraging.

Savage River Dam Action Seen Soon

Cumberland Water Chief Calls It PWA Job.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Early action on the project of building a dam or dams on Savage River, for control of the Potomac, was predicted today by Charles J. Bruce, superintendent of the municipal water supply, who reported to the mayor and city council that the project probably will be a 100 per cent PWA job.

Bruce recently attended the National Rivers and Harbors Conference at Washington, where more than 300 similar projects were discussed. The Savage River dam was one of the first 12 projects approved at the conference. The Upper Potomac River Control Board recently reported that approval of the project to assure a controlled level of the Potomac would be made soon.

Control of the Potomac River level has been advocated for many years to aid industries in this section and improve sanitary conditions.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Hans Fallada.

In the year 1932 there appeared in German a novel called "Little Man, What Now?" ("Kleiner Mann, Was Nun?") which had instant and enormous success. Translated into English, it became a best seller in both England and America.

The author's real name is Rudolf Ditzen. He was born in Pomerania, yet when Americans talk about Pomeranians they do not mean little men. He is 40 years old having been born July 21, 1893, at Griefswald. His father was a jurist, and the boy grew up in big cities, Berlin, and Leipzig. But he always loved the country and had a queer homesickness for it, which he thinks was derived from his remote ancestry. He did not do well at school, living in a world of his own imagination, and reading every book he could lay his hands on.

He worked on farms in the country, and according to his own statement, he "became a notable cow and horse midwife." Back he went eventually to the city and had years of poverty and privation and physical and mental suffering; then he married, settled down in a small town, and solicted advertisements for the local newspaper.

He had done some creative work, which attracted only little attention; although he says that "Anton and Gerda" is his most creative book. No one was more astonished than he when "Little Man, What Now?" became internationally famous. You see, he had regarded himself as one of the little men.

He says that, apart from his desire to produce a work of art, his aim in this book was "to bear witness to the unimportant people, who are very different from the popular conception of them."

I remember Clyde Fitch used to say that the great novelists and dramatists seldom write about great men. They write about the little men to whom great things sometimes happen.

Hans Fallada has rather curious habits of composition; instead of writing in the morning, when one would think his mind would be most fresh and vigorous, he writes only when he is physically tired. He gets up at five every morning, works out of doors all day long, and writes in the evening.

His neighbors knows him only by his real name, Herr Ditzen, and many of them have no intimation that he is the writer of world-wide fame.

309 Families Seek Help in Shenandoah

Woodstock, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—The Shenandoah County Federal Relief Administration had appeals for aid from 309 families in April, the report of Mrs. J. W. Bailey, director, states.

Of this number, 202 families received aid, 22 were closed after receiving help, 56 were rejected and 29 applications are pending. Aside from formal applications for aid, about 200 families were given surplus food, the report adds.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

THERE is no sport quite like pitting the experts against each other from the sidelines. Today it will be on a subject very close to all of us, on a subject, moreover, in which each of us feels himself to be something of an authority—diet, health, and longevity.

The text comes from Dr. Henry Smith Williams' little book, "Why Die Before Your Time?" (McBride, $2). After which we shall hear the rebuttal of that doughty skeptic, Dr. Logan Clendening, as expressed in his well-known volume, "The Human Body" (Knopf, 1927, $3.50; Garden City Publishing Co., 1932, $1). And then you can take your choice and talk it all over in the privacy of your family circle.

THEO. HALL.

When Dr. Williams was just short of 21, a diagnostician declared he had valvular lesion of the heart (an incurable complaint) and gave him 15 or 20 more years to live. At the age of 70, after a full and active medical career, another specialist examined him and said: "Well, about the only thing you need to look out for during the next 30 years or so is not to get struck by a railway locomotive."

Not flinching, then, from the classical taunt, "Physician, heal thyself!" Dr. Williams comes forward to offer advices on how you may overcome such obstacles and achieve a long and happy life. "You, Typical Reader," writes Dr. Williams, "are about 35 years old. You have 50 years of life ahead of you, if you are to round out your normal span. . . . The normal condition of your body-machine during your time of maturity—say, from 35 to 85 or 90—should be a condition of health. . . . You should not lose a day's work or an hour's play through illness."

Barring injuries or disease, Dr. Williams avers that this desirable state may be attained by a low-protein diet—40 grams of protein a day, as contained in eight ounces of lean meat or cheese or five glasses of milk. Fat and the onslaught of the "Great Killers"—heart disease, kidney disease, apoplexy, and cancer—may thus be avoided. Alcohol and tobacco, conducive to these, should be eschewed; but he realizes the futility of that particular counsel. Exercise is necessary. The very best exercise, however, is that which should occur halfway through a meal—"suddenly push back from the table and keep on pushing."

All this Dr. Williams rounds out with a variety of illustration and physiological evidence. Some of these are amusing in their way, such as the fact that a thin slice of bread and butter will replenish all the calories one loses during an 18-hole round of golf. Then he brings in any number of famous long-livers, among them Count Cornaro (1464-1567), whose life was despaired of at 33 and who lived 70 years thereafter on a strict daily diet of 12 ounces of solid food and 14 ounces of grapejuice. "A fat life or a long one" is the alternative Dr. Williams maintains. Pleasant hobbies and no worries are factors in longevity, but in the last analysis "you are what your food makes you."

* * * *

All of which, I make bold to infer, would give Dr. Clendening the pip. Let me quote a few passages from "The Human Body."

"Can anyone by taking thought or care add to his span of life? I do not think so. It is the custom of people who have attained an unusual age to grant an interview in which they record, doubtless in a kindly spirit, the reason for their advanced years. There is one peculiar fact about these dicta: no two agree." A strictly vegetarian diet will be praised, or meat three times a day; abstinence from alcohol, or a daily ration.

"The fact is," writes Dr. Clendening, "that the span of life of any individual is largely determined, barring accidents, at the moment when he starts off . . . the impetus being largely the result of hereditary determinants. Accidents include not only being hit by a Ford, but also being hit by a pneumococcus—that is, getting pneumonia.

"We say: 'A man is as old as his arteries,' and, certain reservations being noted, that is sound physiologic doctrine. But what causes arteries to harden? Favorites among the accused agents are alcohol, tobacco, red meat, and salt. Yet it must be plain to anyone, even to one who has had the disadvantage of a Harvard education, that people who indulge in all these ingredients freely go on to ripe old ages, and others who flee them religiously die of apoplexy and angina in a state of total decrepitude at the age of 53." Mummies of ancient Egyptians, who had no tobacco, show hardened arteries. Strict Mohammedans, who never touch alcohol, have just as high an incidence of hardened arteries as the indulgent Western peoples.

"No," writes Dr. Clendening with feeling, "much as I might like to believe it, happy as I should be to follow dietary and ethical restrictions if I were convinced of their validity, an impartial examination of all the means yet proposed to prevent early death or lengthen life leaves me with the conviction that nothing anybody does to himself after he is born makes more than a few hours' difference at the most."

* * * *

One point of fact may be brought up. Dr. Williams had promised the prudent person of 35 a further natural span of 50 years. But actuarial figures are not so cheery. For in spite of the advances in health techniques since the middle of the last century, the advance in life expectancy at 35 has been modest, to say the least. The average person of 35 in 1850 could expect 25 and three-tenths more years. In 1925 the average person of the same age could expect 25 and four-tenths more years.

Fete Marks National Day Of Rumania

Capital Society Pays Its Respects on Nation's Anniversary.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society joined in the celebration of Rumania's national holiday at the reception given yesterday afternoon by the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles A. Davila, in the legation which several years ago housed Queen Marie on her visit here.

Rumania's national day is today, but because the Minister will go to Newark, N. J., to conduct the Rumanian services, the day was celebrated in Washington yesterday.

May 10 is an important day in Rumanian history, comparable to the Fourth of July in the United States. It was first observed in 1877, when the country won its complete independence. On May 10, 1881, Rumania was elevated to a kingdom, and National Day at the end of the World War in 1918 marked the union of the Rumanian states into one country. Yesterday's functions commemorated the three holidays in one.

Minister Receives.

The Minister received his guests at the head of the wide marble staircase in the legation, and walked with each to the door of the grand salon, where the guests gathered. Ladies of the legation staff presided at the tea table, among them being Mme. Popovici, wife of the Secretary of the Legation, who wore a frock of crisp black taffeta with a wide white collar and a large black hat of taffeta. Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Financial Counselor, wore a costume of pale beige. Mrs. Woodson Houghton, the former Miss Geta Triester, Secretary to the Rumanian Minister, also assisted at the tea table and wore a costume of navy blue with a wide collar and cuffs of hand-blocked linen.

The Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, arrived chatting animatedly with Senator Arthur Capper. The Ambassador of Germany, Herr Hans Luther, was greeted on all sides by friends interested in the recent announcement of the engagement of his daughtr, Fraulein Gertraud Luther.

Others present were the Minister of Greece, Mr. Charlambos Simopoulos; the Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite; the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wallsted; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, the Minister of Ecuador, Senior Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close, and the Charge d'Affaires of Egypt, Nicholas Khalil Bey.

Guests at Reception.

Others were Mr. Jefferson Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mrs. Robert Mackenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel and Mrs. Arthur Krock. Mrs. David Lawrence wore a smart outfit of navy blue, and Mrs. Wade Ellis, who with Mr. Ellis, was in black; also there were the Counselor of the Netherlands and Baroness van Breugel Douglas, the latter looking chic in a black and white printed ensemble and a black hat, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Matthews Dick.

Mme. Peter wore an ensemble of pale gray. The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi were present the latter wearing a smart tailored black crepe dress with a white turban. Miss Mabel Boardman wore a printed silk costume, trimmed with green with a black hat. The Solicitor General and Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs were there, the latter wearing a smart gray blue suit, trimmed with ermine, and a brown sailor hat. Others present were Mrs. Ted Britten, in a printed silk with a large rough black straw hat; Mrs. Frank C. Letts, seen chatting with the Misses Patten and Mr. Thomas Bell Sweeney, looking very chic in black with a small black hat; Mrs. Duncan Cameron, in an ensemble of dark blue and her daughter, Miss Elsie Quinby, in a printed frock with a smart white turban; Miss Florence Harris, who looked stunning in dark blue, trimmed with white, and a small, bright red crocheted turban; Miss Nelia Veverka wore as a becoming offset for her very blonde hair a black and white printed silk frock with a large black straw cartwheel hat.

Army Horse Show Set for May 30

Fort Myer Event Draws Outstanding Field.

The officers and enlisted men at Fort Myer, Va., will present their annual horse show Decoration Day, Wednesday, May 30, at the horse show grounds on the Experimental Farm, near the west end of the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

Col. Kenyon Joyce, commanding officer of Fort Myer, who is president of the horse show, has announced that proceeds from the show will be contributed to the Army Relief Society. Col. Joyce has selected Lieut. Col. Charles P. George, Sixteenth Field Artillery, to serve as director of the show, with Maj. A. D. Surles, Third Cavalry, as chairman of the arrangements committee, and Capt. Harold S. Blakeley as secretary.

Entries will include many of the outstanding horses that have been shown in the District of Columbia, Virginia and Maryland horse shows in the past winter and this spring in addition to the well-known jumpers and show horses of the Army stables at Fort Myer.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Strickler, of Kansas City, who were guests in the Capital last week, have returned to the Shoreham after a trio to New York. Mr. Strickler was chairman of the President's ball committee in Kansas City in January, and last evening attended the dinner and reception incidental to the presentation of the money proceeds to the Warm Springs Foundation president, President Roosevelt.

Mr. Strickler was elected a director of the United States Chamber of Commerce at the chamber's annual meeting last week.

Spanish Envoy Fetes Visiting Naval Cadets

Large Dinner and Dance at Embassy Honors Elcano Party.

The retiring Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas entertained at a large dinner last evening, followed by a dance to which additional guests were invited. The de Cardenas will leave May 26 for the Ambassador's new post in Paris.

The dinner was given in honor of Capt. Salvador Moreno, commander of the Spanish training ship, Juan Sebastian Elcano, which is now docked in New York. The commander with his officers, and about 35 midshipmen, made the trip from New York to Annapolis yesterday, where they spent the day at the United States Naval Academy, coming to Washington in the late afternoon.

Dinner was served at three large tables arranged in the ballroom of the embassy, and the guests number 126. The room was decorated with flags of the Spanish republic, and on the tables were masses of yellow spring flowers.

Guests and Hosts.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was hostess at the Ambassador's table, and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Col. Henry L. Roosevelt, was at the table with Senora de Cardenas. Mrs. Roosevelt presided at the third table with Capt. Moreno.

The dinner guests included members of the Diplomatic Corps, officials, members of the State Department, and high-ranking officers of the Navy. Mrs. Curtis Dall, daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, was also among the guests.

The guests danced until dawn after a buffet supper served after midnight. Late in the evening there was a floor show given by two talented young dancers. The patio of the embassy, that delightful arabesque between-dances gathering place, was gay with the tropical plants and an abundance of cut flowers.

Early Morning Party.

Many who attended the party will remember the dance given last year for the officers and midshipmen of Elcano, and the breakfast which was served to a small group that morning aboard the ship, which was at that time in the Washington Navy Yard.

Early this morning, in contrast to last year, groups of smiling Spanish midshipmen were being introduced to the delights of scrambled eggs and bacon in restaurants, according to a long-established custom for after-dancing parties in Washington.

Though the Elcano party was missed by the Capital debutantes, the midshipmen had a compensating thrill out of visiting the cafes.

Mrs. Donna Harter entertained at a small luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Howell Moorehead sailed from New York for Europe yesterday. She will spend the summer traveling abroad and expects to return to the Capital in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Montgomery Pierce announce the marriage of the latter's daughter, Miss Margaret Agnes Shea, to Mr. Edwin Josef Madill, which took place yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, in Chevy Chase. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth officiated in the presence of the immediate family and a few close friends. After a short wedding trip Mr. Madill and his bride will make their home at Harvard Hall, in Washington.

Northa Porter's Troth Announced

Mr. Claude R. Porter, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. Porter announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Northa Louise Porter, to Lieut. Richard Walden Mayo, U. S. A., son of Mrs. Jeremiah J. Mayo and the late Mr. Mayo, of Arlington, Mass.

Miss Porter attended Drake University for two years and received her bachelor of arts degree from George Washington University. She is a member of Delta Gamma Sorority. She has been active in the Young Democrats Club of Washington.

Lieut. Mayo was a member of the class of 1926 at West Point, where he was prominent in athletics and was captain of the fencing team. He participated in the 1928 and 1932 Olympics, competing in the modern pentathlon. Lieut. Mayo is now stationed at Fort Myer, Va., with the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

The wedding will take place in June.

Flowering Garden Forms Spring Setting for Ceremony.

An unusually pretty garden wedding which was of great interest to Washington took place yesterday afternoon, that of Miss Rion Fortescue, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue, to Mr. Dalton Gillespie Viskniskki, son of Col. and Mrs. Guy Thomas Viskniskki, of Montclair, N. J.

The ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock in the garden of Twin Oaks, the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Charles J. Bell, before an improvised altar placed under the twin oaks for which the estate is named. The altar was flanked on either side with palms, and had as a background the charming old house which is covered with vines of wisteria in full bloom.

Heirloom Bridal Gown.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore her maternal great-grandmother's wedding gown of old ivory satin, fashioned with a long train. Her voluminous tulle veil, edged with rare old lace, was held in place by an old-fashioned diamond tiara, belonging to her paternal grandmother. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of mixed white flowers.

Miss Natalie Whitehall, of Sayville, Long Island, was the maid of honor, and wore a charming frock of white mousseline de soie with a short fitted jacket and long sleeves puffed from the shoulder to the elbow, and fitted tight from there to the wrist, which was finished with a narrow band of ruffles like those around the neck. A large white picture hat of the same material with a pink ribbon and the arm bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium with the pink predominating completed the ensemble. The bridesmaids were Miss Helene Fortescue, sister of the bride; Miss Jane McKee, Miss Isabelle Perry, Miss Eliza Mitchell and Miss Janet Viskniskki, sister of the bridegroom. They wore frocks like that of the maid of honor with the exception of blue ribbons on their hats and blue predominating in their bouquets, which were like that carried by the maid of honor.

Rose Garden Reception.

Mr. William Blum was the best man, and the ushers were Mr. Charles Montgomery, of Montclair, N. J.; Mr. Samuel Mayhon, of Iowa; Mr. Walter Seibert and Mrs. William McFeeley, of New York, and Mr. Edward Sieburn, of Louisiana.

Following the ceremony the couple received the guests in the rose garden. They were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Fortescue, mother of the bride, who wore a gown of rose crepe made on long lines and with blue flowers on the front and a short jacket. A large blue hat completed the costume. Mrs. Viskniskki, mother of the bridegroom, also stood in line.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson and their daughter, Miss Randolph Richardson, will be at home to guests Sunday afternoon, from 4 until 7 o'clock. Those who will assist at the tea table are Mrs. George Rothwell Brown, Mrs. Franklin Kenworthy, Mrs. John Barbour, Mrs. Nannie Jobe, Mrs. Robert Graham, Mrs. Ewell Thornton, and Mrs. John Enochs.

Bachkes Leave For European Post Sunday

The retiring Minister of Norway and Mme. Bachke will leave Washington Sunday by motor for New York, and will sail on Tuesday aboard the Empress of Britain for Europe. They will go direct to Paris, where they will look for a suitable residence for the legation, and later will go to Norway to spend the summer, returning to Paris in the early fall.

The Minister and Mme. Bachke have been entertained day and night for the past few weeks, and between parties have been packing their household furnishings for the long trip to France. Among the last to be packed is a pastel bust portrait of Mme. Machke completed Tuesday by the young Norwegian artist, Mr. Bjorn Egeli. The portrait is unusually lifelike. The most remarkable quality of the study is the textile value of the hair and skin and the fabric of Mrs. Bachke's white satin gown.

On Friday the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom will entertain at a farewell reception for the Minister and Mme. Bachke at the legation on R street. Cards have been issued for the tea at 5 o'clock.

Constance Ralston Weds in New York

A wedding of interest to Army and residential society in Washington is that of Miss Constance Ralston, daughter of Mrs. Robert R. Ralston and the late Col. Ralston, Corps of Engineers, to Lieut. Robert H. Booth, Field Artillery, son of Mrs. Rosetta Booth, of Washington, which took place Friday, May 4, in New York.

Mrs. Booth was presented to Washington society in December, 1930. Upon her graduation from Bryn Mawr College in 1932, she joined her parents, then stationed at Schofield Barracks, T. H.

Lieut. Booth attended the University of Virginia and was graduated from West Point with the class of 1930. Following the ceremony Friday he sailed on the Army transport Republic, to return to the Hawaiian Islands, where he is stationed with the Eighth Field Artillery at Schofield Barracks. He will be joined later by Mrs. Booth.

Miss Mayo Is Engaged To Mr. William Smith

Mrs. Pendleton Mayo has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Virginia Alida Mayo, to Mr. William Preston Smith 3d, son of Mrs. Lucien Green, and grandson of Mrs. Henry Varnum Butler, wife of Rear Admiral Butler.

Miss Mayo, who is the younger of Mrs. Mayo's daughters, was presented to society the past winter and is a popular member of the younger set. The wedding will take place in June.

Repeal Bulletin, Even Lipsticks Wine-Flavored

Each Kind, Port, Burgundy and Others, Comes in Different Shade.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A creator of luscious lipsticks has inaugurated a bar from which the ladies may take their choice of port, burgundy, claret, grenadine, chianti, and madeira — in lipstick form. And actually, old wine went into the making.

The idea now is to taste your lipstick. The port flavor is a rich deep tone, favored by brunettes. Burgundy is a bright medium color, giving a natural appearance. Claret, somewhat lighter, serves as a brightening shade for light complexions. Grenadine, a vivid red, heightens the color of the wearer. Chianti, an electric tone, is designed for the artificial lights of evening. Madeira, slightly orange, has a tendency to make discolored teeth appear whiter.

Here's a toast to these lipsticks designed to give the smoothness and sparkle of old wine to our lips: "Long may they last, and their flavor linger."

• • • •

Airy and Inexpensive.

Complaints about the high cost of lingerie receive a silent but eloquent answer in the offer at a downtown store.

On the first floor in the center aisle are three tables. The first is piled high with silk panties, dainty and cobwebby as can be, priced at 89 cents. Each pair is trimmed in a good quality of beige lace. On the next table are the more conservative pin point panties, soft and sheer—79 cents. On the other are plain silk ones, built for wear and cut to fit. These are 59 cents.

Inexpensive and Flattering.

Most rubber bathing suits are popular because they flatter the figure. Those in a local shop are popular for that reason and on account of their price—$1.95.

They consist of two separate parts, bandeau and trunks, both of which fit like the binding on a book.

Rubber bathing suits have advantages. They won't bulge, stretch nor shrink. And they're free from the moth menace.

The suits are available in red, brown, blue, and green, trimmed in white. Caps and shoes may be purchased to match, for only a small extra cost.

Kaleidoscope Earrings.

Almost everyone is familiar with the inside sights of a kaleidoscope, the myriad of strange shapes and odd colors you see through the peep hole. A local shop has some clip earrings which look like the bottom of a kaleidoscope. They appear to be a sort of glazed glass with an infinite variety of paisley figures inside. They are dashing accessories for print or solid-color cocktail dresses.

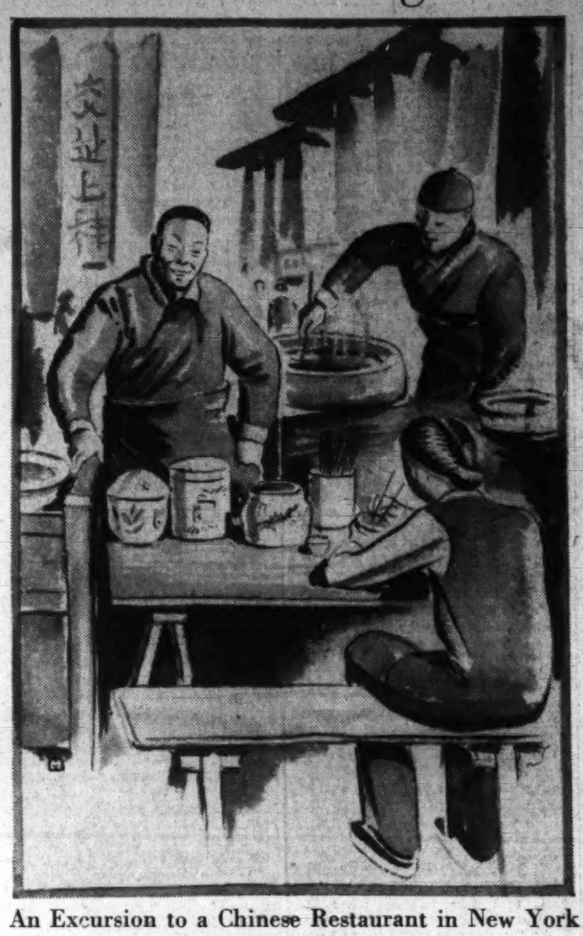
Tea as Orientals Have It Amounts to Large Meal



An Excursion to a Chinese Restaurant in New York Discloses This Race Consumes Plenty of Pastry of a Tea Time.

What do we know of foreign foods as the natives prepare and serve them?

An American ordering a foreign dish in a restaurant often receives a modification of the original recipe, altered to suit American tastes. But behind the modification is a realm of romance and glamour, tradition and custom that molds the foods of the nations into what they are to their own people.

Today begins a series of articles that take you through the kitchen doors of the nations of the world.

By Susan Mills.

WILL YOU HAVE a dish of tea?

Tea time, to the Occidental mind, is an hour of conversation accompanied by watercress sandwiches, dainty mints, fragile cups and a fragrant beverage.

Tea time, to the Chinese, includes the conversation, the beverage, but there's a world of difference in the rest of the set up.

For the purpose of comparison let's glimpse into a New York Chinese restaurant and see what the native patrons order.

Peep in the Kitchen.

We take a table in the back of the room where we can see the diners and peep into the kitchen. A well-dressed Chinese at the next table spears a steaming white ball with his chopsticks. A waiter hurries by. On his tray is a plate of smooth, round, white objects about the size of a coffee cup. A glance at other tables shows that all the Chinese are ordering and eating the same things.

We ask a waiter. "What are those things?"

"Chinese pastry. Ya. You like some?"

"Please."

"Ya." He hurried off.

He returns, his tray full. There is a plate of egg-sized balls, eight of them, covered with a semi-transparent, gummy substance.

Some large balls turn out to be steamed bread dough. The waiter explains both varieties are Chinese tea pastry to be served with tea unflavored by sugar, lemon or cream.

The small pastries are filled with finely chopped pork, green pepper, shrimps, rice and spices. They are covered with flour and water paste, then steamed in a large wooden container. The large balls are bread dough filled with chopped fried pork. The steaming process completes the creation. The outer gummy crust should be peeled off, much as one peels a mushroom.

But the quantity? An order for two includes four to six large pastries, eight small. We look around. One Chinese starts on his second large pastry. The small ones are all gone.

The waiter says "Ya. We eat much. But this is only tea time."

"What, then, do you eat for dinner?"

"Oh, Moo Goo Gai Pen, lots of chicken, vegetables, rice——"

"Have any in the kitchen?"

"Ya."

We follow him into the kitchen. A Chinese cook stands before the stove on which is a row of iron pans that look like shallow wash bowls. He runs boiling water from a faucet into one of them and whisks it clean with a grass brush.

First, some fat drops into the pan, a few chopped onions, then a handful of chicken cut in large pieces. A quick stir follows, then spoonfuls of two or three imported Chinese sauces. The cook measures nothing. His movements are quick and efficient.

A little flour is added for thickening, a handful of chopped raw water chestnuts, a handful of Chinese peas, pods and all, a few more stirs, and the mixture is piled into a serving dish. Another serving dish is filled with vegetables, cooked with fat; cabbage, celery, peas and others. We ask:

"That is for about six people?"

"No, only two."

Two bowls of rice, each holding about two cups, clatters onto the waiter's tray and the whole order goes into the dining room.

We taste some bird's nest soup. It is thick, white and delicious. It is made with a clear chicken stock as a base. The cleaned, soaked nests are added, minced chicken, rice, egg-white and seasoning.

We go back into the dining room. An immaculate Chinese dressed in a well-fitting dark suit stands at a table and peels water chestnuts. We ask him, "What do they taste like?"

He peels one, washes it. "Here." It tastes like a cross between apple and fresh pineapple.

He explains Chinese seldom eat chow mein or chop suey. They like chicken dishes, vegetables and few sweets. Americans know only the chop suey and chow mein dishes, he says, because all restaurant signs give those names. But Americans, when becoming acquainted with real native dishes, like them and eat them often.

Chinese pastry is popular with his people, he says. It is cheap and filling. Yes, Chinese use lots of flour pastes in cooking, as well as rice. Steaming is often used in the preparation of foods.

We munch on another water chestnut, thank the man and go out into the street.

Restaurant signs are Chinese and Italian; voices are high and wailing or clipped and deep. The air is filled with mingled odors—spice and gasoline fumes, food and flowers.

We go up the street between the pushcarts filled with snails, herbs, spices and dried shrimps.

Did you like your dish of tea?

Next Thursday Hungary invites you into her kitchen. One of her native chefs will be a spokesman, and through him a new realm of cookery will be revealed.

Parents' Love For Children Called Danger

Too Much Possessiveness Held Peril at Meet of Psychologists.

POSSESSIVE parental love is the greatest danger a child has to face, psychologists agreed at the Conference on Mental Hygiene at Epiphany Church yesterday.

"The fundamental rule for every parent to know is that children are individuals and must be treated as distinct personalities," Dr. Lucille Dooley, psychiatrist, said in her address, "Mental Health Begins at Home."

Mental hygiene begins at home, because all conflicts begin at home, Dr. Dooley explained.

"All children are born with an impossible demand for infinite love and omnipotent power," she explained. "As soon as they begin to realize they will never have enough of either of these things, conflicts and frustrations begin. It is the work of the parent to help the child use frustrations to aid in his growth. All later maladjustments grow from lack of adequate adjustment in childhood."

Mrs. Elwood Street in her address on "How Can Parents Help Their Children to Become Responsible Adolescents," advised mothers, as far as possible, to let their adolescent children do the things that the "others in the crowd" do.

"Too often adolescents think their parents as the only obstacle that keeps them from being like other people," she said. "Give them a free rein as far as possible."

When adolescents begin to take an interest in the opposite sex, mothers should have the children get together at home rather than meeting at movie houses or at the front gate, Mrs. Street believes.

"Of course it seems silly to you when you see boys and girls of junior high school 'deseperately in love,'" she said, "but don't laugh. It is serious to them. It is no easy job getting the children to bring their friends to the house. I have found that the best way is to say that you have baked a nice chocolate cake, that you have to make a call next door that night, and wouldn't daughter like to have company? This usually works. When you come home don't complain about the condition of the house. That is only one of the things parents of adolescents have to be patient about.

"You must be impersonal, and recognize these trials for what they are," she concluded, "the signs of growth."

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Chinese Dishes Will Pep Up All-of-a-Sameness, Jaded Menus.

By Susan Mills.

A FEW practical suggestions in the field of Chinese cookery will help the housewife brighten up her jaded menus.

The two dishes by which the Chinese kitchens are always identified, chow mein and chop suey, though not what one would call strictly native, are popular and always good.

The Chinese cook uses what is known as a "pumaiy soup" to give a superior flavor to all Chinese dishes. It is the secret of the magic in their cookery.

It is used in gravies as well as for the first cooking, instead of water. To make it, equal parts of chicken and lean pork are required—one-half pound each to about 6 pints of water. The meat is chopped fine and cooked slowly 2½ hours, until the liquid has evaporated. In order to do away with the oil, the Chinese put into the mixture a bowl of chicken broth, straining it through a thick cloth until the liquid is clear or the oil is on top, from which it is skimmed. It is then kept in a cool place.

Chow Mein.

Purchase 1 pound of pork tenderloin cut into strips 2 inches long. Heat frying pan and add ¼ cup pork drippins. When hot add the sliced pork tenderloin and reduce the flame and simmer slowly for 15 or 20 minutes without browning the meat. Then add 1 cup bamboo shoots cut en Julienne (which simply means strips about 3 inches long and ⅛ inch wide), ½ pound of water chestnuts cut into shreds and 1 cup of celery cut en Julienne.

Moisten with ½ cup white stock and simmer gently until vegetables are cooked. Season with 1 tablespoon of Chinese sauce and thicken with a little cornstarch mixed with cold water. Serve on a bed of crisp fried noodles and garnish top with egg threads. For egg threads beat 1 egg and fry in large oiled frying pan without browning. Cut into threads about 2 inches long.

Chop Suey.

3 lean pork chops, 3 onions (more if you like)

1 bunch of celery, ½ cup rice, 3 bouillon cubes (beef)

3 green sweet peppers, 3 cups hot water

Cut pork chops in small pieces and brown. Cut celery thin in two-inch lengths. Cut peppers in thin lengths, also cut onions in small pieces. Next you add rice, bouillon cubes which have been dissolved in the hot water. Cook slowly 40 minutes.

What Today Means

By Mary Blake.

"Taurus."

If May 10 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 10:30 until midnight.

You have every reason to feel full of pep and ginger on this date, for it is going to prove to be a very pleasant one in many respects. Business dealings will terminate successfully.

If born on May 10 and you are of the fair sex, a desire to have your own sweet way is a characteristic that once in awhile will get you into hot water. You possess the power of exercising a mighty good influence over a certain member of the sterner sex, and if you try doing so, a happy conclusion can be expected.

The child born on May 10, when it grows older, will have the ability to grasp things quickly, but, being rather headstrong, may want to do things according to its own ideas. It must learn to listen to reason. Music always will be of great interest to it, and this trait should be encouraged.

If you are a man and your birth anniversary is May 10, be prepared to spend it in a most pleasurable manner, provided your vanity has not caused you to keep it a dark secret. A delightful surprise is in store for you during the day and if it has not happened before reading this a state of expectation on your part is justifiable. Your financial condition is going to show a marked improvement. If not yet married, get busy, for affairs involving the heart have a promising outlook for this month.

People born on May 10 are marvelously adapted for commercial life, literary work, teaching, or the army.

I WAS A SPY! - - - By MARTHE McKENNA

What Happened Thus Far.

Marthe Cnockaert McKenna, a Belgian who served as a British secret agent during the war, in previous installments told of her service as a nurse in a German military hospital—and of aiding the Allies at the same time. She caused the destruction of a German munitions train after surreptitiously reading a notation in a notebook of a German officer who flirted with her. She discovers a German officer, billeted at her father's cafe, is a German espionage agent. Disguised as a German soldier, she visits her uncle. Nearby two German soldiers are stationed as "weather observers." She slugs one of the men in their hut in the woods and lays a trap for the capture of a spy who is in contact with them. Later she goes to Brussels with a German colonel.

"THE Colonel," I gasped. Then the door-handle began to turn. I choked back a scream. Turning I saw—nothing. The lieutenant had vanished. But he could not possibly have escaped through the window in time. There were no cupboards for a man of his size. He had taken refuge beneath the bed.

The Colonel smiled a trifle vacantly, and then encircled me in his arms.

"You have not yet undressed, my angel," he chided. "Ah, but I see that you were about to unpack my cases," he said, his gaze falling upon the two open suitcases which the lieutenant had abandoned. His lips sought mine, while my mind was in a whirl. What could I do? I must play for time. Somehow I must give the lieutenant a chance to slip over the balcony into his own room.

"I can not stay here after tonight," I whispered. "I am frightened—besides, what will the Herr Oberartz say at the hospital if I am absent when the All Highest arrives? There are various duties in the hospital which are specially assigned to me and it is essential that I should be present."

"Do not worry," replied the Colonel, "we have two days yet, and your leave can be extended. He arrives on Saturday to review the troops at 11 o'clock, and will afterward inspect the place. He will even stay the night, so that he will only take a cursory glance all round. I think that you could perfectly well stay away for the All Highest's visit altogether. What do you say, my sweet?"

So, at least I knew what I had set out to learn! "I promised the Oberartz I would return," I mumbled, hardly aware of what I was saying, for I was thinking feverishly of the man under my bed and what would happen if he were found. My lover held me close and pressed his lips on mine.

Somebody was walking along the passage. Little did they think of what was being enacted in here. Suddenly there came a tremendous crash of glass, and then oaths followed by peals of unsteady laughter. The Colonel relaxed his hold, listening. In a second I was at the door, for whatever it might be, it offered some momentary respite. Outside a blear-eyed Saxon officer of middle age swayed gently to and fro in an ecstasy of delight, and aimlessly brandished an empty wine-glass, in admonition of a silent waiter who was collecting heaps of shattered glass upon his tray. Crowded in a near-by doorway and peeping over each other's shoulders were the Saxon's comrades, applauding loudly. I hoped the Colonel would follow me out of the room, and so I rushed up to the gallant Saxon and asked him what was the matter.

The officer stiffened and made an attempt at a bow which nearly overbalanced him, and then said: "Believe me, the explanation is quite simple, Fraulein. This pig-dog and myself tried to pass in the passage, but as you see there was not room for such an intricate maneuver," and his arm swept the passage, where at least five men could have walked abreast. "Therefore," he concluded, "our momentum was such that we were unable to avoid collision."

Locks Door of Room.

As he said these last words the Colonel, to my intense relief, looking somewhat surprised and annoyed, came out and joined us. When nobody seemed to be looking in my direction I seized the momentary opportunity to slip back to my bedroom.

Here I double-locked the door and rushed to the bed. As I hoped, the Lieutenant had made his escape. One terrible crisis of that night had been got over, anyway. I was not sure what to do next, but I had not long to wait.

The Colonel was knocking on the door and fruitlessly turning the handle.

"Listen, my angel, I am waiting outside. Will you not let me in?" he was urging. "Perhaps it is that you are undressing," he said as an afterthought, "and you would prefer that I wait?"

"Yes, I am undressing," I told him breathlessly.

"Very well, I understand. I will rejoin you later and go to my friends for one quarter of an hour. Au revoir, my dearest dear. We shall meet again very soon," and I heard his footsteps recede up the corridor.

All of a sudden I knew exactly what I was going to do. I would run from the hotel immediately, while the Colonel was in the other room. I had all the information I had wanted. As for my suitcase with the few spare clothes I had brought with me, that could go hang. There was nothing there which could incriminate me.

With the help of my railroad pass I should be able to catch a train before dawn for Roulers, and once I was outside the hotel and in public I did not think the Colonel would pursue and cause a scene for reasons I have mentioned.

I scribbled in pencil on a piece of writing paper:

"Herr Colonel: I reserve the right of a woman to change her mind. I was a young and foolish girl; I was carried away by you. Now I am going home, and I hope eventually you will forgive me. Good-by. MARTHE."

Then, seizing my special railway pass and the key of the door, for I had decided to relock it on the outside and keep the key to perplex the Colonel for a few extra minutes while the distance between us widened as much as possible, I tore open the door and dashed straight into the solid gray form which blocked the way. It was the Colonel.

He smiled down at me and explained a little thickly:

"My angel, I have just remembered that when I was holding you in my arms in our bedroom I heard my cigar case drop to the floor from my breeches pocket. I had come to ask that you would hand it out to me, angel, for I loathe other men's cheap cigars, but, behold, here you come to meet me!" Suddenly the significance of the fact that I was still fully dressed seemed to penetrate his fuddled senses, and he may have noticed the wild look in my face.

"What is the matter, mein Fraulein?" he interrogated, holding me by the shoulders and gently forcing me back through the door. "Where do you go?"

"Please—let me go," I breathed. "I have changed my mind. I am leaving for home. Please, please—but forgive me. I am frightened. I ought never to have come. I was mad, crazy, but please let me go!" I tried to slip from his grasp, but he held me firmly, though not unkindly.

"Little one, little one, there is nothing at which to be frightened. Calm yourself. Sit down and I will fetch you a drink." He kissed my forehead tenderly, and I leaned away from him as far as I could as I looked around me wildly, feeling my last chance of escape had gone.

Marthe Makes Escape.

In an alcove of the wall beside the door stood the washhand stand with a basin and ewer of gleaming blue china. I looked up at the colonel. He was neither intoxicated nor sober. He was not very steady, and I did not think his brain would work quickly. I let my body lie limp against his, with my head resting near his shoulder, then in a flash, I braced my limbs and leaped back with all my strength. I reached the washhand stand and, seizing the blue ewer, launched the whole contents full into the colonel's eyes before he understood what was happening. He staggered back gasping, and just behind him, as I had calculated, were the two suitcases by the bed-foot. I rushed at him and threw all the weight of my body into a sudden shove. He toppled headlong backward over the cases and I think his head struck the copper nob of the bed-post.

I turned and catching up my train pass and the door key which had fallen to the floor, fled from my peacock bedroom, locking the door behind me.

One hour and a half later I was lying back in the train, still breathless and incredulous, gliding swiftly through the night toward Roulers.

It was growing late when the train drew into Roulers. A woman passenger on the trains at that time was unusual, but my pass carried me safely through the military police at the barrier. Everybody was still in bed when I reached the cafe, but presently my mother was embracing me in the doorway. She did not question me as to where I had been. It was enough for her that I had returned safely.

"'Canteen Ma' called here yesterday and left this," she told me, slipping a cheap pincushion into my hands. The message read: "No. 63 is absent on a special mission until Thursday. If before that day you have urgent news to transmit you must yourself carry the information to the Van Roots' farmhouse along the Thourout-Roulers road. You will knock at the door with two short and three long raps and hand your message to a fat woman (with a florid complexion) within. You will not allude to the message in any way, but will greet all as acquaintances."

I knew of the Van Roots, trustworthy folk who lived at a lonely farmstead among pine trees lying nearby the highway. But the distance from Roulers was about 15 miles by road, and as I could not risk using such a conspicuous route, it meant a journey of almost 20 miles by night over rough country-side. I should have to leave Roulers as soon as darkness fell and make all haste for my destination. The Oberartz must not know of my return to Roulers until after I had come back from delivering my message.

I should have overstayed my leave, but I could excuse myself on the grounds of my imaginary grandmother's extreme illness and the fact that I had heard in Brussels that the All Highest would not visit us until Saturday.

Departs on Mission.

I left Roulers at 10 o'clock that Wednesday night in a shower of rain and inky blackness. I had only a small torch to guide me and could wear neither coat nor hat, as anyone who had the appearance of having traveled any distance in those days was immediately under suspicion.

The old town was only a mile behind me when the moon suddenly glided from behind a cloud, plunging the deserted landscape into a sea of light and shadow. The drizzle ceased and I felt the warmness of the night, but the rain had made the ground slippery and sodden, and the way was wild and strewn with small undulations. I had to break my way through hedges, and sometimes had to crawl through ditches, keeping a watchful eye for prowling figures.

It was 6 a. m. by my watch when I came on an old house standing by itself, where a light was flickering in the lower windows. I was not certain of the way, so I called at the door to inquire. The aged woman who answered my knock showed no surprise at my muddy, begraggled condition. She said not a word, but took my hand and led me in, patting my wrist softly. She gave me steaming hot coffee and bread and butter by the fire and then directed me onward.

When I had walked three-quarters way up the stone-flagged garden path of the Van Roots' homestead, I suddenly noticed beside the wooden porch two muddy bicycles. They were German military bicycles. My heart stood still, and I thought of retracing my steps. Then it occurred to me that to do so would be indiscreet as I might already have been observed from the windows. I advanced boldly to the door as though it was quite a natural thing to be smothered in mud from head to foot, but I thought it prudent to knock on the door like a chance caller and not to use the preconcerted signal. The red-faced fat woman herself opened the door and I greeted her loudly like an old friend.

The passage behind her was empty so I quietly rapped out the signal on the door panel. She nodded, and I passed the note into her hand.

Message Delivered.

"It shall go immediately," she said, when she saw the "Urgent" with which I had marked it. She glanced over her shoulder. "Two gendarmes on night patrol called here for food," she told me. "They are washing in the scullery. You must come upstairs before they see you, and hide among the rafters."

I stretched myself in the straw of the loft and fell fast asleep. An hour later she told me I might safely come down. After a square meal, which I took basking at a table in the sun-bathed garden, she helped me indoors, washed me in a hip-bath like a small child; during which process I several times fell asleep; and having taken my garments to be brushed and dried, she led me to a feather bed, into which I slipped blissfully, and closed my eyes.

At 10 o'clock that night, I started for home. I had determined to spend the next day with friends who lived half-way to Roulers, and to complete the journey the following night. Thus I calculated I could be home at 4:30 a. m. on the Saturday morning, and would have ample time to present myself at the hospital at my usual hour of 7 o'clock.

As I set out to the hospital that Saturday morning the air was fresh and enlivening, the birds sang merrily and the sun shone in a blue sky. I thought of the All Highest sitting silently in his opera box and wondered if today was to be his last. The streets were festooned with gay flags in honor of his cominng.

Alphonse was tinkering with the wheel of an ambulance before the steps in the courtyard as I approached. He looked at me searchingly, for although he could not have known where I had been, he may have had a pretty shrewd idea.

"Good morning, sister," he began. "Have you heard the news; it has just been received. The Kaiser is not coming to visit us after all. For the last few day the 'Seven Sisters' have flown over and bombed us regularly, so they have decided that it will be too dangerous for him."

I said nothing, for there was really nothing to be said.

The Choice of an Opening Lead.

Opening leads are precise, exact and therefore very difficult. I think it is safe to say that hundreds of Bridge games and rubbers are lost day after day and week after week because the correct suit or the correct card in a suit is not chosen for the Opening lead.

In today's hand, as a Double Dummy proposition—that is, with all cards exposed—no Opening lead would defeat the contract, but as a practical proposition there is one lead which is almost certain to accomplish that result. The lead of any other suit could only have the effect of giving the Declarer an opportunity to readily fulfill his contract. The hand and bidding were:

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♡	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	3◇	Pass
4♣	Pass	4♡	Pass
5♣	Pass	6♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's lack of 2 honor-tricks is fully compensated for by his extremely fine distribution. Of course, West's Forcing Takeout comes as a matter of curse, the hand containing 4-honor tricks, a very good suit and practically adequate trump support for partner's bid suit. The later showing of both diamonds and clubs is justified by the holding, and West is not unduly optimistic in contracting for the Small Slam.

Before South made the Opening lead the bidding was reviewed. It seemed that the Opening lead of a trump could serve no good purpose as the effect of it would be to put whatever trump strength North might have between the pincers of two powerful hands (though, as a matter of fact, with a trump lead, if the Declarer decided to finesse, the contract could still be beaten). Clubs, inasmuch as they had been bid on the right of the leader, did not seem a good suit to lead, either. The spade lead might be considered, though, as the cards lay, this also would permit East to fulfill his contract. The choice was definitely between the spades and the diamonds, and, as it happened, the one lead to defeat the contract was the diamond lead.

As it happned, this lead was the one actually made. East played the Queen from Dummy and, when North covered with the Ace, ruffed with a small heart. The Declarer recognized that the clubs must be established before the trumps were drawn. Therefore he led two rounds of clubs, upon which everyone followed suit, and a third round, upon which South followed. On the third round the seven of hearts was played from Dummy, and North discarded. Now the Ace of hearts dropped South's singleton trump and East held an established club suit. Unfortunately, however, the trumps were not established, and East's only entry to his own hand was by means of a ruff. Thus played North eventually won two tricks, both with trumps.

It is interesting to note that even with the diamond Opening East can make his contract by ruffing the third round of clubs with the Ace of trumps, leading the last trump from Dummy, and playing the Queen if North fails to play the King. However, anyone making this play without seeing all the cards certainly belongs in the realm of superman.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Kidney Stones.

A great many people suffer from kidney stones and, in addition, there are some who have them, but, so far from suffering from them, are unaware that anything is wrong. Most of us have read of silent gallstones. We know that as long as gallstones remain quietly in the gall bladder they may cause no pain. Few of us know that kidney stones may also be silent.

An attack of kidney stone colic causes great pain. A person who has had one is more than anxious to avoid another. His physician tells him that other attacks are in store for him in all probability and he feels—at least for the time—that he will do anything to escape.

There are some things his physician can advise him to do. All stones, whether in the kidney or gall blader, are composed of the two classes of material—collids and crystalloids. The latter are the bricks and the former the mortar. If there are bricks but no mortar we have crystals in the bile of gravel in the urine, but the crystals are not bound together to make stones. A basic condition necessary for stone formation is a lack of balance between colloids and crystalloids.

To prevent the formation of this colloid mortar, whether the stones are in the gall bladder or in the kidney, physicians advise that the diet be rich in vitamins and especially in vitamin A. This is about as far as knowledge has gone on that point.

Presentation at Court of St. James Entails Strenuous Etiquette Lessons

Four Women From Here and Nearby to Be in Court Function.

AMERICAN women fortunate enough to draw winning tickets for the court presentations next week at Buckingham Palace now are undergoing workouts for their prizes. Their days alternate with lessons in court etiquette and sessions with court dressmakers. Their hearts are as fluttery as brides waiting wedding days or opera singers their debuts.

In the school of etiquette sponsored by the American Ambassador, the women to be presented at court are learning how to handle their trains, how to curtsy in the style approved in royal circles and are being tutored in what they may or may not say when ushered into the royal presence.

Four women from Washington and nearby are among the 21 to be presented at the two courts Tuesday and Wednesday. At the first court, Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Miss Christine Long, wife and daughter of the American Ambassador to Italy, and Miss Jo Claiborne Bolling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. Bolling, of Petersburg, Va., and Broxville, N. Y., will be presented. At the second court, Wednesday, Miss Helen Lee Eames Doherty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, of Washington, will be presented. Miss Doherty is attached to the staff at Copenhagen of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Minister of the United States to Denmark.

Thing of Precision.

Learning the court curtsy for the presentation is in itself no small job. The curtsy is not only a thing of beauty but also of precision.

The secret of the curtsy is to sink gracefully to the floor without bending the back. This may sound simple enough, but try it to the accompaniment of a 2-yard train plus an arm bouquet or fan. Then the simple action takes on complications quite apart from the awed sensation felt by the foreigner at the sight of a real, if very gracious, Queen.

Women who love clothes are sisters under the skin the world over, and to such the court costume must rank without peer. The very meticulousness of the regulations that govern its composition makes it doubly worth striving for.

The august lord chamberlin, who issues the invitations—or, rather, "commands"—to appear at the palace also supplies minute instructions in the matter of attire. Since the ceremony is held from 9 p. m. to about midnight, the first requisite is full evening dress. The court train, hanging from the shoulders, must not be more than 2 yards in length nor extend beyond 18 inches from the heel, while the white tulle veil that floats from the regal headdress of three white plumes is limited to 45 inches in length. It is permissible to complete the ensemble by a bouquet, a fan, or a fancy bag.

There is no ruling as to color, but court gowns usually echo the popular shades of the current season. Hence, in recent years white and the pastel tones have found favor with debutante and dowager alike.

Twin Gowns.

Formality is the watchword of the occasion, but one rule seems to introduce an air of "sweetness." This is the custom by which mothers and daughters make their court bows together. In this connection one of London's noted designers recently introduced a practice which received the personal commendation of Queen Mary. A few seasons ago when the wife and daughter of a prominent Canadian appeared at Buckingham Palace, they came in a mother-and-daughter combination. The mother was in blue satin, but her train was composed of the cobwebby lighter blue lace that fashioned her daughter's frock. The daughter's costume was completed by a court train cut from the deeper-toned, richer satin so suited to her mother's maturer years.

Now the distances between the heart of the British Empire and her most distant outposts have been virtually annihilated by fast modes of travel, it is becoming more and more the custom for prominent citizens of the overseas dominions and crown colonies to bring their daughters out at one of the London courts. When the deb is later introduced to society in her own country, society reporters always stress that "Miss So-and-so wore the gown in which she was presented at the Court of St. James last spring."

At the four London courts, two of which are held in May and two in June, about 30 American women will be present. The American Ambassador faces the task of picking this group from about 200 applications.

The colorful custom of holding a court function is also carried out in Canada, with very slight differences. Nowadays daughters of well-known Canadians make their formal bow to society at the state drawing room held every winter in Ottawa. The drawing room, the Canadian equivalent of a royal court, is held by the governor general, his majesty's personal representative, on the night following the opening of Parliament. This generally falls in January or February.

At the last Canadian state drawing room, held on January 27 of this year, Miss "Sunny" Robbins, formerly of Washington, now Mrs. Murray Forbes, followed the custom of her Canadian cousins when she bowed before the Earl of Bessborough in the lovely cherry velvet train which she had worn at Buckingham Palace the previous summer.

D. C. Federation To Open Annual Meeting Today

Senator Dickinson Will Speak at G. O. P. Politics Session.

THE TWO-DAY annual session of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will begin at 10 o'clock today at the Roosevelt Hotel. Jay N. Darling, director of the Biological Survey, will be the principal speaker at the opening session.

Reports will be made by the presidents of the 31 federated clubs.

• • • •

Mrs. Samuel A. Swiggett, chairman of the division of art, will award the Penny Art Fund prize tomorrow to the club contributing most toward the advancement of all the arts.

Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, director to the General Federation, will award the prize to the club securing the most subscriptions to the Clubwoman, the official magazine of the federation.

Mrs. Willard E. Buell will award the prizes in the annual poetry contest conducted under the auspices of the committee on poetry.

• • • •

The culmination of the annual meeting will be the banquet at 7 o'clock tomorrow night at the Mayflower Hotel, in honor of Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and in observance of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the local federation.

Mrs. Johan C. Kondrup is chairman in charge of the banquet.

To Speak at G. O. P. School.

SENATOR L. J. Bakewell, of Connecticut, will be the speakers at the evening session which will convene at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the headquarters. Senator Hastings' topic will be "America Gone Mad." Representative Bakewell will speak on "Is the Republican Form of Government Declining?"

• • • •

Three sessions will be held tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel. The school will close at noon Saturday.

The Right Rev. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, will lecture on "Unemployment and Its Remedies" before the Auxiliary Board of the National Catholic School of Social Service at 11 o'clock today at 2400 Nineteenth street northwest.

Following the lecture a buffet supper will be served in the drawing room of the school. Hostesses assisting Mrs. Arthur F. Mullen will be Mrs. Joseph C. Fehr, Mrs. James Hanley, Mrs. Charles P. Stewart, Mrs. Charles P. Neill, Mrs. Joseph O'Mahoney, Miss Mildred Merrick, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Clara Bradley and Miss Louise McGuire.

Miss Ethel Ketcham will speak on "Replies to New Deal Critics" before the education committee of the Woman's National Democratic Club at 11 o'clock today at the Club House, 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Student Wins European Trip

School Girl Gets Prize in Exam on the League of Nations.

New York, May 9 (U.P.).—Cleta Moody, 16, Providence (Ky.) High School student, prepared today for a trip to Europe—first prize in the annual competitive examination for high schools on the League of Nations.

She is honor student and editor in chief of the School Annual, according to Mrs. Louise Laidlaw Backus, chairman of the award committee of the League of Nations Association, which conducted the contest.

This is the second time in eight years a girl has won the contest.

"Girls won five out of the seven prizes in this year's contest," said Mrs. Backus. "The winners came from Southern and Eastern States with the exception of one prize winner from Wyoming. Winners of first places in other years have come mainly from the West and Middle West. The choice this year was a hard one, many excellent papers having been submitted. Results speak well for the instruction our high school young people are getting in international affairs."

Others who won prizes or were given honorable mention include Miss Wardine Norvell, of Manchester, Tenn., second prize, $25; Margaret Railey, Lynchburg, Va.; Joe Cook, Casper, Wyo., and Henry P. Laughlin, Hagerstown, Md., who received $5 prizes.

Better Dress Conservatively for Women Bosses, Says Stenographer Who'd Rather Work for Men

SHE IS DRESSED to go anywhere with assurance and poise, as all good secretaries have to be. Her outfit meets the demands of conservatism and smartness. She is Miss Wilhelmene Warnick, student at Washington School for Secretaries.

Considers It Secretary's Duty To Look as Nice as Possible

Head of One Employment Agency Surprised at Carelessness of Job-Hunting Girls in Matters of Dress, Says the Most Competent Are Worst Offenders.

To be dressed smartly and suitably for office, for errands that may carry her anywhere in the city, and possibly for dinner—are some of the contradictory clothes requirements of a secretary. And as one of them phrased it, the secretary has to be dressed well, but not too well.

This is the fourth in a series of six articles about clothes and their relation to "women who do things."

By Irene Hasbrook.

THE FLUFFY GIRL in the red dress said judicially, "Clothes are a good investment."

Then in an intense tone—"and women bosses shouldn't say things about well dressed girls without justification. Women are mean. I'd rather work for men any day."

A little beside the point. She had been asked her ideas on clothes. What did she think was the proper way for a stenographer or secretary to dress?

Almost a Duty.

She swung back to the subject.

Neatness, it seemed, is the main thing. Neatness and good taste. It's almost a duty for a feminine office worker to look as nice as possible—"consideration for the people around you." All this regardless of the size of the salary.

"But that's a problem. Even on little money you've got to look nice. If you don't, you may lose your job. If you do, maybe they'll decide you look too nice for the salary you're getting. And then where are you?"

How do men executives differ from the female of the species in regard to clothes ideas? Listen:

"If you're dressing for a woman boss it's best to be conservative. But men want a girl to look nice. You know what I mean. They like to have us dress up. Not flashy, but just to look well. They appreciate it and are proud of the office girls when outsiders come in. But women, no. Be as unobtrusive as possible. Black and dark colors are best."

Some other girls were in the Washington Employment Exchange that day taking tests to prove their fitness to be placed in jobs.

Two of them considered clothes "frightfully important." Another one admired some girls in an office in which she had worked recently. "They always looked so nice. They dressed very sportily. No, I don't mean strikingly. I mean in regular sports clothes. Sweater suits and things like that. Then at 5 o'clock they'd leave and go out to play golf with their boy friends."

Here's where Mrs. A. C. Beaver, president of the exchange, differs with that young applicant. She said:

All Sorts of Places.

"One prime requisite of the stenographer or secretary is that she always be dressed suitably. That makes quite a problem for the girls, as frequently employers send them out on important errands. These may take them all sorts of places—libraries and courthouses, for instance. Then there is the possibility the secretary, for business reasons, may dine with her employer. Sports clothes, while they may look very well in the office, are not the things to wear on such occasions."

"Able to meet the public" is a phrase appearing frequently on employers' form cards kept on file at agencies. And that, says Mrs. Beaver, is the employers' way of saying they want women who are dresed to meet any busines situation.

"Which means street clothes of the tailored variety," Mrs. Beaver explained.

Something which doesn't attract attention seems to be the idea. But something in which, if you're looked at directly, the looker gets the impression you're dressed well.

A spokesman for the National Personnel Bureau maintained much the same thing and further stressed neatness. "It's the main clothes requirement for an office worker," she said.

"This attribute wins by several lengths as being the most important thing, outside of her working ability, a secretary can possess or cultivate. They all said so, everybody queried.

A woman who handles the placing of stenographers in another agency is amazed at the way ability and good dressing do not go hand in hand. "Our best applicants are the most careless," she lamented. "It's dreadful the way some of them dress. I wish you could see one of the most competent stenographers in town. She's almost an apparition and for that reason alone we have a great deal of trouble placing her."

So why go further? Employers are as smart as anyone. They know clothes are important.

Read in tomorrow's Post about clothes and the woman lawyer and what the latter has to say about the influence of dress on juries.

Chinese Co-Ed for U. S. Women's Independence

Miss Pearl Chen Also Admires Their Knowledge of World Affairs, But She Thinks Americans Live Too Quickly to Have Fun.

ALTHOUGH A FLOURISHING TRADE has been carried on between China and the United States for many years, a few imports could well be added to each country's list, believes Miss Pearl Chen, of Shanghai. The attractive young Oriental will return to her home late this summer, after completing a year's study in Catholic University's school of nursing education.

She Would Like These.

The things she would like to have her native land import from the United States are independence of women and children, and consciousness of national and international affairs on the part of women.

On the other hand, the United States could use some of China's leisure to advantage, in the opinion of Miss Chen.

"You all rush so. You're always in such a hurry," she said yesterday morning at her Washington residence, 711 Monroe street northeast. "But I don't see that you accomplish any more than my people, who live more leisurely. Time is precious to them, too, but in a different sense. Here you live every minute so fast you can not possibly enjoy it to the full. In China we are under less tension. I believe we live more graciously. Sometimes I wish Americans would relax a little. I think they'd have more fun."

She smiled shyly, afraid she had been too critical of the country that has been home to her during the last two years. She spent last year at Johns Hopkins Nursing School as a special student.

"I really like America very much," she hastened to explain. "Everyone has been kind to me." Her speech is only slightly tinged with a foreign accent but she clings to her native costume. "It is better for Chinese women. We do not know how to wear your clothes. We look awkward in them."

Likes Lack of Domination.

One of the first impressions Miss Chen gained after coming to America was of the gallant independence of the women. She admires the way feminine America sallies forth to make its own living, the way it refuses to be dominated by father or husband.

"It would be good for Chinese women if they had more of that spirit," she said. "Some of them have found jobs in banks or with the government but most of them still sit at home serving the men in their family. Girls in Shanghai and other cities are now permitted to choose their own husbands but in the country marriages are still arranged by the parents."

Miss Chen is strongly in favor of the girls choosing their husbands, providing they choose Chinese. She disapproves of international marriages, believing they create difficulties that can never be surmounted by the children of such unions.

"If a Chinese girl marries an American, an Englishman, any foreigner, she loses caste among her friends and among her people. Nor is she received as an equal by her husband's people. It is better for her to marry someone of her own race."

Children in this country are taught when very young to take care of themselves, Miss Chen has observed.

"I think that is better than our way of having a servant to wait upon each child. Your boys and girls soon become self-reliant. No wonder they are independent when they grow up."

The interest American women take in national and international affairs has aroused the Chinese girl's admiration. She believes a large part of China's future depends upon its women taking an active part in their country's affairs.

Miss Chen is one of three women holding scholarships at Catholic University.

World Filled With Beautiful Girls, Is Seen

Cambridge, Mass., May 9 (U.P.).—In a hundred years or so all girls may be pretty enough to pose for magazine covers or go into the movies.

"Selective breeding," according to F. Alexander Magoun, associate professor of humanics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will eventually eliminate the wallflower.

All women will be attractive, and the beautiful will become more beautiful as time and evolutionary principles reach higher peaks, Magoun believes.

Just as the giraffe's neck grew longer to reach the more succulent leaves atop the tree, so will the ankles of the debutante or the neighbor's daughter grow slimmer, her features become more regular, to reach the more eligible bachelors on the family trees, the educator asserts.

Y. W. C. A. Meet Votes to Urge Birth Control

Association Pledges Itself to Work for Such Legislation.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9 (Spl.).—Birth-control legislation has been indorsed by the Young Women's Christian Association, which is holding its annual convention here.

The association pledged itself to work for "social legislation such as measures which will provide that the dissemination of birth-control information shall be placed under authorized medical direction."

The association has also indorsed the labor union movement in a resolution which recognizes "the right of all individuals to organize for their own and the common good."

Other recommendations in the social program included minimum wages and limitation of hours of work, unemployment and sickness insurance, old-age pensions, abolition of child labor and adequate appropriations to protect the basic institutions of education.

Another resolution asked for a program of tax revision that would do away with inequalities in education offered children in city and in rural schools. Still another urged President Roosevelt to refuse further appropriations for naval construction pending the 1935 naval conference.

Self Expression.

By Katherine Smith.

Lightly turn my thoughts to glamor;
I, with winsome words enamor
My own lonely heart. With laughter
Speak to it of love, but after
I have whispered, cried and chanted
I must take this much for granted:
If I didn't live without it
Would I have to write about it?

Violinist Turns Dancer.

MILTON SCHWARTZ, violinist in the National Symphony Orchestra and the Washington String Quartet, discovered recently he can dance, and so he is listed to do a couple of solos, one ballet and one acrobatic, when the Bekefi-Deleporte studios put on their big program at the National Theater Sunday night, May 20.

• • • •

The string quartet is going to Woods Hole again this summer, leaving the end of June to stay till September. Among other engagements they have four concerts booked for the famous Wianno Club on Cape Cod.

• • • •

"Of course they play well; look at those names—not an American on the list!"

• • • •

As a matter of fact, all four are Americans and only one of them, Sidney Hamer, the English cellist, is naturalized. Milton Schwartz was born in New Jersey and grew up here; Paul Brightenburg, the second violinist, is a Washingtonian, and George Wargo, the viola player, comes from Pennsylvania.

Not for Charity.

MRS. CHARLES ASTRYKE, of Alexandria, was puzzled one day by seeing one of her young sons busily engaged in washing away on one of the wheels of a neighbor's car. The neighbor himself was occupied with doing the rest of the machine.

After a time the offspring came in very dirty and considerably damp from his labors. He held out a grimy hand triumphantly. In it lay a nickel.

• • • •

"Walter Perry, you didn't ask for that nickel, did you?"

"No'm, I never ask for money," returned the small boy with righteous indignation shining from his big round eyes. "I only said to Mr. Smith that I wondered if I was going to get paid for this job."

AMERICANS AND CHINESE could exchange a few traits to their mutual advantage, believes Pearl Chen, of Shanghai, shown on her way to class at Catholic University. She has a scholarship in the school of nursing education.

Wilhelmina Bullock Wins Prize From Store

Miss Wilhelmina Bullock, 408 T street northwest, has won the $100 prize offered by the Hecht company for the longest bona fide list of men's shirt measurements. The contest, open to both men and women, was held in connection with the introduction of a new method of fitting shirts. Several hundred entries were received.

Miss Bullock is the daughter of the Rev. George O. Bullock, pastor of the Third Baptist Church, and Mrs. Bullock.

WHY do you suppose Chevrolet keeps repeating, in all of its advertising, "Drive it only 5 miles"? Very frankly, here's the reason: Chevrolet engineers have tried out all the various makes of cars in today's low-price field. They have compared performance—on rough roads, in traffic, over hills, through sand and mud and water! And they have proved, to their complete satisfaction, the same things that hundreds of thousands of Chevrolet owners are proving in their daily driving: How much more smoothly a car travels, with genuine, fully-enclosed Knee-Action. How much more comfortably it handles, with shock-proof steering. How much more restfully you ride, in a Fisher Body car. How much more safely you drive, with cable-controlled brakes.

Better Economy

And how much finer performance and better economy are secured from an overhead-valve Six! In other words, Chevrolet engineers know for sure that the Chevrolet ride simply can't be matched by any other in the low-price field. They know it—hundreds of thousands of owners know it—and now we want you to know it too, before you make your final choice of a low-priced car. That's why we urge you to "Drive it only 5 miles"—and that's why we promise, "you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car."

Victim Slain Accidentally, Krout Pleads

Hagrstown Murder Case Nears Cumberland Jury Action.

Gun Used as Bluff to Obtain Rent Cut, Accused Says.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The case of Claude H. Krout, 47, restaurant operator, of Hagerstown, charged with the slaying of Owen D. Sherley, owner of the Vivian Hotel in that city, which was removed here from Washington County at the instance of the prosecution, neared the jury late today.

Krout was the principal witness in his own behalf. He said he pleaded with Sherley, his landlord, to keep the rent at $80 after Sherley had given notice that it would be jumped to $100 a month.

"Sherley ignored me and I pulled my revolver with the intention of firing it into the floor to frighten Sherley," Krout testified. "If then he refused to reduce the rent, I intended to commit suicide. I was desperate because of poor business and high rent. It was the first time I ever fired a pistol. It evidently 'jumped,' the bullet striking Sherley. From then on I remembered nothing."

Wife Mortgaged Home.

There was testimony to show that Krout, divorced, married the widow of Dr. Derr, of Hagerstown, and that she had mortgaged her home to set him up in business, which did not succeed. The defense presented several character witnesses to show that Krout was of a shy, retiring nature.

The State presented the glass pistol which Krout said he had produced to scare Sherley at his filling station. At that time Krout was fined for carrying concealed weapons.

J. Lloyd Harshman, State's attorney for Washington County, in his opening statement before the jury, said the prosecution would ask for a verdict of murder in the first degree.

Called Unfortunate Victim.

Omer T. Kaylor, Hagerstown, named by the court to defend Krout, admitted Krout was guilty of some crime less than murder in the first degree, that he was an unfortunate victim of circumstances, worried by ill health, debt, overwork and a losing business.

The defense attorney contended that Krout, in the imagination of a man with a diseased mind, believed Sherley was dangerous and vicious.

Kaylor explained that Krout had a pistol because he carried home receipts, and that there were vicious characters coming and going to the Federal transient bureau in the neighborhood of the restaurant. The weapon was drawn as a bluff, and not in premeditation, he contended.

State witnesses said that Krout exchanged a small pistol at a Hagerstown store for a large one of .38-caliber, and also bought shells. The prosecution presented witnesses who testified that after firing five shots, killing Sherley instantly, Krout was reloading his gun when he was knocked down and the weapon taken away. Previously Krout, according to testimony, had attempted to intimidate Mrs. Sherley by displaying a gun.

The court did not limit the time for addresses before the jury. In addition to arguments by Harshman and Kaylor, addresses by State's Attorney William A. Huster, of Allegheny County, assisting the prosecution, and Thomas L. Richards, for the defense, are to be made.

Miller New Principal Of Martinsburg High

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.). Edwin W. Miller has been named principal of Martinsburg High School, succeeding Roy E. Boone, principal for several years. The latter will resume his teaching there. Mr. Miller has been absent for several months on special work. He previously had been instructor in manual training in the school.

Special Levy To Replace U.S. Aid Is Planned

Washington County Board May Assume Control of Relief Fund.

Hagerstown, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The Washington County Board of Commissioners has indicated that a special levy for relief purposes probably will be made, and at the same time board members revealed a plan to take over administration of these funds, instead of placing them at the disposal of the county federation or any other separate agency.

If the board adopts the maximum levy permitted for relief, 8 cents on the $100, about $60,000, would be available.

Three members of the Welfare Federation, Mayor I. M. Wertz, of Hagerstown; Park W. T. Loy, president of the federation, and Frank Leiter, urged the board yesterday to authorize a county relief levy.

President Loy, group spokesman, said the federation had been advised that no Federal or State relief aid will be forthcoming after June 1.

Data tending to show that CWA jobs were made available to persons who could not be classed as needy has been prepared for presentation to the county commissioners. Investigation of cases applying for employment under the CWA was placed in the hands of the Welfare Federation.

A member of the board today said the commissioners knew of the necessity of levying for relief, but felt it would be unwise to turn over money obtained from taxpayers to a separate agency.

Since all highways in the county have been taken over by the State, the board finds much extra time, this commissioner said, which it could devote to directing the expenditure of tax monies appropriated for relief purposes.

The Welfare Federation here, which was praised by Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, for the efficient manner in which it handled Federal and State relief funds during last winter, and for the low cost of administration expense, advised the Federation to send representatives before the county commissioners to ask that they levy for relief needs.

Westminster Sewerage System Bids Opened

Westminster, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Bids for construction of a sewage system and disposal plant for Westminster were opened yesterday. The bid of Ligon & Ligon, Baltimore, $60,456.75 for the disposal plant, and $138,363.55 for the sewage system, was low.

38 Production Loans Granted

Frederick Credit Group Has 33 Applications Pending.

Frederick, Md., May 9 (Spl.). Thirty-eight loans totaling approximately $25,000 have been made through the Frederick Credit Production Association, a unit of the Farm Credit Administration, embracing Frederick, Carroll, Montgomery, Washington, Allegany and Garrett Counties, Thomas S. Anderson, secretary-treasurer, said today. Thirty-three are pending.

One hundred and sixty applications for loans have been filed. Inspectors are investigating the security of proposed borrowers. While a few have not measured up to requirements for the amount of loans asked, the majority of applications have been given initial approval, and are in process of final consideration.

Mr. Anderson said the rush apparently is over. While applications are still being made, the number this week is materially reduced from last week, when 17 were filed. A recent order empowering Mr. Anderson to draw up drafts at the home office after loans have been approved has facilitated the distribution of loans.

A meeting of the loan committee, Thomas C. Barby, Gaithersburg, Montgomery County, chairman, was held at the local office. A number of applications were examined.

Tabby Cat Adopts Ten Young Rats Offered as Food

Big Laurel, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—W. D. Sanders, farmer of the Galena neighborhood, recently found a nest of ten young rats which he believed would make an excellent meal for his Persian house cat, just become the mother of a large family.

The young rats were duly presented, alive, to the cat. She sniffed them tentatively, then pawed them in among her kits and adopted them.

The rats are thriving with the kittens, and Mr. Sanders is wondering what's going to happen when they all grow up.

U. Va. Revises Building Plans

New Bids on Engineering Structures Are Due by May 22.

Charlottesville, Va., May 9 (Spl.). New bids on revised plans for the University of Virginia's proposed engineering buildings have been called for and will be opened May 22, it was learned today. The Public Works Administration has appropriated $372,000 for the three buildings.

Eleven firms were listed in the first bids, opened here last week. All were rejected as in excess of the sum allotted. The university's estimates, it was explained today, were made last summer, and the contractors were forced to calculate an increase of approximately 20 per cent in the cost of materials since.

Only these eleven original bidders will be allowed to make new estimates on the revised plans, it was said. Revision of plans, authorized by President J. L. Newcomb and the university board of visitors, will eliminate an auditorium.

The work of changing university water and gas lines in preparation for the building job is about 70 per cent complete.

Virginia Tests Drivers' Eyes

Several Thousand Called to Prove They Are Physically Fit.

Richmond, May 9 (Spl.).—The motor vehicle commission today notified several thousand automobilo drivers who have visual or physical defects that they are required by law to take an examination for fitness to drive before they can get their operator's license renewed on July 1.

Meanwhile, the division prepared to renew upward of three-quarters of a million operators' licenses by midsummer. All licenses issued in 1932, when the driver's permit law became effective, must be renewed by July 1 this year, it was stated.

Operators who have received notification that they must take an examination are only those who certified in previous applications that they had some physical defect that might handicap them in driving.

They may apply for examination before any State police officer or at headquarters of the motor vehicle division here at any time before June 30, it was announced.

"Tainted Money" Denied to Police

Cumberland, Md., City police and firemen who become ill should not benefit by "tainted money," according to Commissioner Harry Irvine, who objected to a council order to give $90.44 to the Police and Firemen's Welfare Association. The money was taken from seized slot machines.

Irvine said the money should be added instead to the city's charity fund. The Police and Firemen's Welfare Association pays members who lose work becuse of illness and also gives funds to dependents in event of death.

Walton Seeks Anne Arundel Court Position

Banker Makes First Move in Hot Fight Expected for Clerkship.

Annapolis, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The first shot in the forthcoming political battle in Anne Arundel County was fired today when James A. Walton, president of the Annapolis Banking & Trust Co., announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for clerk of the circuit court.

Mr. Walton long was identified with the old organization forces, but lately he appears to have adopted more independent ideas. He served ten years as county commissioner for Annapolis, the Sixth District, and was president of the board several years.

The court clerkship is one of the most desirable county posts. All county and legislative candidates are to be voted upon, and indications are there will be a warm primary fight in September, with several candidates, both Democratic and Republican, for the court clerkship, as well as other posts.

Other Democrats mentioned for the court clerkship are W. Meade Holladay, Annapolis, former president of the State Capital Bank and former member of the House of Delegates; former State Senator George T. Comwell, Fifth District, now serving as register of wills, and W. Martin Brady, Annapolis, for many years chief deputy clerk, now serving as clerk by appointment, succeeding Frank S. Revell, who was named Federal immigration commissioner.

On the Republican side, Frank A. Munroe, retiring Annapolis merchant, is most frequently mentioned for the court billet, but he appears unwilling to enter a fight. It would not surprise if Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt enters the race for the G. O. P. nomination. The mayor several months ago announced his candidacy for Governor, and notwithstanding the fact that this appears to be between Harry W. Nice and Webster Smith, of Baltimore, Quenstedt only recently said he was in the fight to a finish. He has not been making an active campaign, however.

Married Women Teachers Barred

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 9 (Spl.).—A ban was placed upon married women as teachers in Morgan County's public schools for the coming year by the board of education last night. None will be used unless the supply of single teachers from Morgan County is inadequate, the announcement said.

Ten elementary and one high school teacher were eliminated under the policy.

Fredericksburg Park Work to Be Completed

Fredericksburg, Va., May 9 (Spl.). Completion of city park work, begun under the CWA, has been provided by approval in Richmond of the first local Federal Emergency Relief project. About 60 men will be employed.

Garden Clubs Of Virginia Hold Session

Deficit Threatens Fate Of Virginia Music Fete

Choral Festival May Not Be Held in 1935 if State-Wide Support Is Not Obtained; Charlottesville Loss Heavy.

Charlottesville, Va., May 9 (Spl.). The future of the Virginia Choral Festival is threatened by financial difficulties, and the event may not be held in 1935 unless some Old Dominion city is willing to take a deficit, or State-wide support can be secured.

One thing seems certain, it will not be held again in Charlottesville of business men of this city are forced to underwrite it alone. Too heavy a loss was taken by guarantors in the third festival, held recently, they declared.

The deficit on the big musical event will amount to approximately 60 per cent of expenses, according to Verbon E. Kemp, of this city, secretary-treasurer of the festival association. The audit has not been completed, but Mr. Kemp said receipts from the five concerts amounted to only $1,546. Expenditures will total approximately $3,900.

"We can not hold the festival here again upon this basis," he said. "It will have to be a State-wide proposition."

The first festival, held here in 1931, showed a deficit of 14 per cent on expenses of approximately $6,000. In Richmond the following year underwriters of the event were required to make good a deficit of 62 per cent.

The musical series has been acclaimed by the musical world as an event of importance. Among those who have so expressed themselves is Walter Damrosch, noted conductor.

Musicians here have computed that the usual cost for the professional services of those participating in the festival would have totaled $20,650. Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the Washington Symphony, was among those donating their services.

Knights Pick New Officers In Convention

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The feature of the annual meeting here of the Grand Commandery, Knights of Malta, jurisdiction of Pennsylvania, which includes Maryland, was a parade of plumed knights, with a large turnout of Dames of Malta in white uniform.

One section represented the college of the ancient. The parade was headed by J. J. Heintz, Pittsburgh, grand military commander, with H. H. Derlan, of Cumberland, as assistant marshal. The drum corps of Henry Hart Post, No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, and Company G, First Maryland Infantry, the latter with a young woman drum major, were in line.

Lancaster was selected as the next meeting place. Burt G. French, Erie, Pa., was elected grand captain general, and Frank Palm, grand senior warden.

Highland Commandery Verona, Pa., was awarded a cup for the greatest increase in membership, having doubled its quota.

Shenandoah Supervisor Named.

King George, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—H. B. Ashton has been appointed supervisor of Shiloh District, King George County, to succeed J. A. Frank, who resigned, it was announced by Judge Frederick W. Coleman at the May circuit of the King George Court.

Machine Gun Fight Staged By Rum Gang

Men in 2 Speeding Cars Exchange Fire Near Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., May 9 (Spl.). The village of Halfway, between this city and Williamsport on the Shenandoah trail, was the scene early today of a gun battle, believed to have been fought by rival liquor groups armed with machine guns.

Authorities have failed to pick up any clews to the identity of the participants.

C. M. Austin, local garage proprietor, witnessed the battle by occupants in two automobiles. Aroused from his sleep by the first burst of fire, he saw two automobiles racing at high speed. A burst of 20 or more shots came from the pursued car, followed by more shots from the other machine, which again was answered by a burst of machine gun fire as the two cars disappeared.

Several months ago, a gang of rumrunners sacked the home of one of the largest illicit liquor manufacturers in this section, seized two truckloads of liquor and kidnaped two men found at the home, only to release them near Kensington, Md.

Several days after the hijackers' raid Federal prohibition agents raided the same place, seized a large quantity of liquor and equipment and arrested three men. The gang who raided the county place were identified as a rum running ring with headquarters in Washington and Richmond.

It is believed by police that today's battle might have some connection with rival liquor rings still known to exist in this section.

Hoover Camp Land Title Is Attacked

Eagle Lumber Company Says There Is Flaw in Abstract.

Virginia Asked to Pay; Now Worth About $26,000.

Richmond, May 9 (Spl.).—Holding that there is a flaw in the title to the President's camp property, 9 miles north of Criglersville, at the source of the Rapidan River, originally purchased for President Hoover and later deeded as a part of the Shenandoah Park area, the Eagle Hardwood Lumber Co. has given notice of a claim of the appraised value of the property against the Commonwealth.

The land is valued at about $26,000. The improvements made by President Hoover and the historical associations of the famous fishing camp and summer White House have made the property one of the most significant landmarks of Shenandoah Park.

The notice revealed that the abstract of the title obtained when the camp property was purchased was, in fact, not an abstract of the property in question, but through error, involved an entirely different tract a quarter of a mile from the property actually purchased.

William E. Carson, of Riverton, chairman of the Commission on Conservation and Development, now trustee of the property under the Hoover deed to the park project and Mr. Hoover's agent in the purchase of the tract, said today that the former President will not be involved in the litigation, but that he will be informed of the action, and his advice will be considered.

Virginia Opens First Liquor Store Tuesday

Richmond, May 9 (Spl.).—Virginia's first State-owned liquor store will open here Tuesday, it was indicated today at the offices of the alcoholic beverage control board.

Walt Mason, Himself

Cry of the Aged.

"We are too old to start again," complained the ancient, broken men. "We've lost the rolls for which we toiled before our bulwarks all were spoiled; our goods and chattels, all complete, are in the pawnshop down the street. We've lost our little strips of ground, our cows were taken to the pound, we've lost our figtrees and our vines, and we can but take in our signs. We can't compete with younger man, we are too old to start again. Once we were young and full of vim, with energy in every limb, and if disaster came along, we met the blamed thing with a song. From out the ruins we arose, misfortune found us on our toes, forgetful how we went kerflop, and eager to regain the top. We did not moan in vain alas, but briskly stepped upon the gas and chased the bad wolf to his den; but we're too old to start again. Our wintry years have found us mired, and we're too feeble, stale and tired to hit a winning sort of gait, and for the poorhouse bus we wait." I hear some old men talking thus, and bitterly they sigh and cuss. But now and then old gents I meet who say they are as good as wheat; with white locks streaming in the breeze and with bone spavins on their knees, they won't admit that they're all in; they plan to shake their jinx and win. While man can teeter on his feet he shouldn't call for a retreat.

Indian Spring Medal Won By O'Brien

Scoring Improves During Second Day; Start Match Play Today.

By Dave Herman.

DON O'BRIEN, 21-year-old Georgetown University golf star, plodded home late yesterday evening for one of his methodical rounds of 73, 2 over par, to capture medal honors in the qualifying round of the Indian Spring Country Club Invitation Tournament by one stroke.

Outstroking a field of more than 150 golfers, O'Brien, a Baltimorean, who, in addition to being Maryland junior champion, is champion of his home club, Rolling Road, smashed par from the first nine wit ha 34, and then ran into an indifferent 39 on the stretch that came perilously close to blasting his chances.

Locked in a triple tie for second place were Gene Vinson, of Manor, transplanted Mississippian, a Dixie golfer of renown; Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, and the husky Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club.

Vinson shot the first nine in 35, with eight straight 4s and a 3 on his card. He ran into a flock of 5s coming in, and it was one of these fives on the home hole that cost him a 39 and a tie with O'Brien. McCarthy, who played his round earlier in the day, and held the lead for several hours, had a brace of 37s.

McCarthy Makes Six.

Standing on the eighteenth tee, McCarthy needed only a par 4 for a 72, but he floundered along the fairway, and wound up with a 6. Webb had a beautiful first nine score. He reeled off eight straight 4s and deuced the ninth for a 34 to tie O'Brien for low for any nine. However, Webb lost his old putting touch on incoming side and took a disastrous 40.

The scoring yesterday was decidedly better than that of the opening day, when only four broke 80. Altogether for the two days 20 were in the seventies, and so keen was the battle for qualifying places that in the twilight six players, tied at 79, had to play off for two places. They were John Janhowski, Catholic University; W. Beverly Mason, jr., Chevy Chase; Luther Steward, jr., Congressional; John Connelly, unattached; C. H. Boyden, Rolling Road, and Lindsey Reiley, young star from Tennessee. Mason won his place on the first hole with a birdie 3, and Boyden got his with a par 4 on the second.

John Shorey, of Kenwood, and Braley Burrows, former public links champion, qualified easily with 75's each, as did Claude Rippy, another municipal star, and the home star, Roger Peacock, Maryland State champion, by virtue of 76's. Maj. R. K. Sutherland, Army and Navy seige gun; Louis Fuchs and Dr. Howard Smith, of Indian Spring, and Harry Pitt, the favorite and defending champion, each with 77. Walter Tynan, Georgetown golfer, scored a 78.

Fitzgerald Stroke Away.

After burning up the first nine in 35, Maury Fitzgerald, stocky Kenwood golfer, shot 45 for the second nine, his 80 being one shot too many.

O'Brien, the medalist, started with a birdie 3 after sinking a 15-footer and picked up another stroke with a deuce on te ninth. Starting back he shot 5—5, two over, birdied the long fifteenth for a 4, and was trapped on the next two, taking 6—4. He played the home hole meticulously for his par 4 that eventually gave him the medal.

Match play starts this morning. Two rounds are slated today, and two tomorrow.

Davis, Phillies' Rookie, Stops Pirates, 6 to 2

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP).—After winning five games in succession, the Pittsburgh Pirates saw their streak snapped today by recruit Curtis Davis who held them to seven hits and pitched the Phillies to a 6-to-2 victory.

Davis, up from the San Francisco Seals of the Coast League, also broke Gus Suhr's hitting streak. The Pirates first baseman had hit safely in 17 successive games.

Capt. Bartell led the Philly assault on Red Lucas with four safe hits. Catcher Earl Grace, of the Pirates, received a split finger from a foul tip in the first inning and forced him to join the other Pittsburgh cripples—Traynor, Lavagetto and Lloyd Waner.

Cronin Sends Stewart Against Hadley, of Browns, in Opener

THREE of baseball's most important cripples viewed yesterday's game from the stands, and all sadly watched the Chicago White Sox break a losing streak of five games at the expense of the Nats—Catcher Luke Sewell and Third Baseman Cecil Travis, because their team took a licking, and Outfielder Al Simmons because he was not able to take a hand while it was being administered.

The Washington club physician attempted to realign Sewell's ailing finger yesterday morning but found that it had been injured so many times previously that he was greatly handicapped in his work. However, several adhesions were broken, the digit put in splints, and Luke was excused and told to give it a rest and see what happens. The treatment caused the finger to become sore for at least two weeks more, and possibly longer.

Travis was not allowed to put on a uniform, but he will do so today and take an easy workout, hopeful that he can resume action by Saturday or Sunday.

Simmons admitted that he was a little "topply" yesterday, but feeling much better. He planned to remain in the Capital for at least a day longer and then to rejoin the White Sox in New York. Like Travis, he probably will not play until Saturday or Sunday.

Manager Roger Hornsby leads his St. Louis Browns into town for a three-game series with the Nats, which starts this afternoon. Two pitchers who have shifted uniforms are expected to oppose each other. Skipper Cronin will use Walter Stewart, ex-Brownie, while Irving Hadley, ex-Nat, is due to toil for the visitors.

Several newcomers appear in the St. Louis lineup. Hornsby is using Harland Clift at third and Alan Strange at short, with Ray Pepper and Earl Clark, Washington boy, patrolling the outer gardens alongside of Bruce Campbell.

Virginia U. Wins In Slugfest, 22-10

Luck, Slugged Out of Box, Comes Back to Win.

Charlottesville, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Virginia's nine defeated West Virginia here this afternoon, 22-10 in a hectic game. Thirty players got into the three-hour contest, during which the Cavaliers scored their largest total of runs against any college team in 30 years. Each team used four pitchers, while holding their best hurlers in reserve for the scheduled game tomorrow.

Preston Luck, cocaptain of the Virginia Team, was pounded from the mound in the first frame, but returned in the second inning and got credit for winning the contest. Lawler and Davidson followed him in order in the box, the latter blanking the visitors in the last two frames.

7 Homers as Cubs Down Dodgers, 10-9

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—In a free-hitting battle that saw 7 home runs and 28 other hits blasted about and out of the windblown Wrigley Field, the Chicago Cubs edged out the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10 to 9, and moved up to the top of the National League.

Hack Wilson, Tony Cussinello, Ralph Boyle and Danny Taylor hit home runs for the Dodgers, each with a mate on board, while Dolph Camilli, Bill Jurges and Charley Root, relief pitcher, lashed out circuit drives for the Cubs. Root's round-tripper came in the fifth, with Gabby Hartnett on base.

The Cub attack, off four Brooklyn pitchers, totaled 20 hits, for 35 bases, including, besides the homers, triples by Chuck Klein and Kiki Cuyler and doubles by Klein and Hartnett. The Dodgers got 15 hits, for 30 bases, for a total of 35 hits and 65 bases.

U. S. Davis Cup Stars to Get Aid of Pro

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP).—The United States Davis Cup selection committee, taking a leaf from the Tennis book of England and France, today announced the engagement of Hans Nusslein, German professional, to play against the American team candidates during their training period at the Merion Cricket Club.

Nusslein will report to Capt. R. Norris (Dick) Williams next Monday with the players.

John Van Ryn, still sticking to his decision not to be a candidate for the team, also will practice with them in view of the injury to Wilmer Allison. The Texan sprained an ankle at Washington Saturday and may not be available for any of the matches in the American zone.

All In Camp.

The other players invited to camp are Frank Shields, Lester Stoefen, George M. Lott, jr., and Sidney B. Wood, jr. All four probably will be named by the selection committee tomorrow night as the team to meet Canada in the first round tie at Wilmington May 24, 25 and 26.

The French and English for years have used professionals to sharpen their players' game before the cup matches, but this is the first time the United States has tried it.

Nusslein, according to Capt. Williams, is not being engaged "for the purpose of coaching or directing tactics, but entirely to give playing practice to the members of the squad."

Last year Mercer Beasley, who developed Cliff Sutter, Frankie Parker and other young players, and now is tennis coach at Princeton, acted as an unofficial coach of the cup team in Paris.

Pros May Help.

Williams said it was hoped that some of the leading American professionals, six of whom now are on tour with Big Bill Tilden's two troupes, also might be available later to practice against the team members.

Nusslein, who defeated Tilden in a "world's championship" tournament at Berlin last fall, is counted by many as second only to Big Bill as a court technician. Tilden himself was quoted some time ago as saying the 24-year-old German was the coming No. 1 player of the world.

He has been a professional since 16, when he was ruled out of the amateur ranks by the German Tennis Federation.

Drissel, Brewer Play Final Game

End College Careers at Virginia Today.

Charlottesville, Va., May 9 (Spl.).—Homer Drissel, of Washington, former Tech High School athlete and veteran Cavalier outfielder, will end his collegiate baseball career here Thursday when the University of Virginia nine closes its 1934 season in the last of a two-game series with West Virginia.

Drissel, co-captain of the team this year, has played an outstanding game in center field for three years, and contributed much to the team which recently annexed the Big Four State championship.

Chick Brewer, of Detroit, also is completing his third and last season of competition on the Cavalier nine.

Coach Gus Tebell is outspoken in his praise of these two stars, and expresses some doubt of being able to find replacements of equal caliber for next year.

5-Run Brown Rally Beats Yanks, 9-8

St. Louis Club Scores All Runs With Two Out in Ninth.

Hemsley Gets Five Hits; Ruth and Dickey Clout Homers.

NEW YORK, May 9 (AP).—Trailing by four runs and with two out, the St. Louis Browns turned on the pressure in the ninth inning today and trotted five runners across the Yankee Stadium plate to score a 9-to-8 victory in the final game of their series with the New York Yankees.

Seventh Homer for Ruth.

The Yanks piled up their eight runs in the third and fourth innings by virtue of four-run rallies in each frame on the might of the sticks of Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey. Each hit home runs with two on base. It was the Babe's seventh of the season.

Clift hit a home run for the Browns, while Hemsley led their attack with five hits in as many times at bat. He also drove in the winning runs in their five-run rally.

Braves Pound Five Red Pitchers to Win, 10 to 3

Cincinnati, May 9 (AP).—With every Boston player but Ed Brandt rapping out one hit or more, the Braves swamped the Cincinnati Reds, 10 to 3, today.

Home runs by Whitney and Lee helped boost the score, but singles nicked off five Red pitchers did most of the damage. Meanwhile the Reds faltered in the pinches, as in the third, when three singles filled the bases with none out, but the next three batsmen popped the chance away.

Navy Winner Of Slugfest With W. L.

Tars Found Three Rivals in Hectic Game; Sexton Hit Hard.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Navy drove two Washington and Lee hurlers from the mound and continued to feats in scarcely less degree off the offerings of a third to win a hectic ball game here today by a score of 11 to 8.

The Generals also took a liberal hand in the swatting, forcing Griff Sexton, ace of the Navy pitching staff, to retire, but their drives, for the most part, were not as hard and timely as those of the Middies. The hitting was the heaviest Navy has shown this season

Dark Hope, Last Away From Barrier, Wins in Pimlico Sprint Feature by 4 Lengths

Gelding Runs 6 Furlongs In 1:12

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 9.—Dark Hope, a massive collection of horseflesh, walked into the stall gate at the 6-furlong chute today and stood like a statue. In fact he was still standing like a statue when Starter Milton pressed the button that sent the field away in the Pimlico Graded Handicap, Class A.

We will transfer the camera to the finish line and await the field. Here comes a big horse. A blue cap is bobbing up and down behind his mane. Well, if it isn't our old friend, Dark Hope! And galloping along four lengths in front of the ace sprinters. Here they are, Dark Hope, Halcyon, Khamseen and Flying Hour on down to the wire.

Make Fast Getaway.

To return to the start, we find that Khamseen, Character and Open Range made a hasty getaway while Dark Hope was making up his mind to do some running for Owner J. W. Y. Martin and Jockey Bobby Merritt. But the big horse with the blue on his back soon bounced away from the barrier. It may have been a street car bell over on the nearby avenue that awoke him and it may have been the pressure of the whip that Merritt applied, but the fact remains that Dark Hope went up the backstretch like a wild horse.

At the half-mile post he had three horses beaten. Merritt kept him bobbing along, finding spots to go through. Nearing the stretch, only Khamseen and Character were between Dark Hope and the lead. Merritt swung his mount to the rail and cut through to come out on top. The remainder of the race was a formality. Merritt kept hand riding and Dark Hope drew away. Halcyon, with Sonny Workman up, did some futile closing to gain second honors, while Khamseen staggered into the third money.

Dark Hope, timed in 1:12 for the 6 furlongs, was only so and so with the betters and supplied a mutuel of $13.

Springdale Rose Stars.

The Palmetto Steeplechase proved a relief as far as jumping races go in that each of the eight starters finished on its own hoofs. The winner turned up in J. B. Belk's Springdale Rose, a horse seldom mentioned in prerace discussions. Four lengths away came Philistion and another three lengths behind was Glanuer, half of the Byers-Clark entry. Silverskin, a 3-5 shot with Mr. R. McKinney in the saddle, was a leg-weary fifth.

The race was between Springdale Rose and Silverskin for three-fourths of the route. Springdale Rose set the pace for a mile and then Silverskin, which had been fencing badly, had a brief spell on top of the field. However, with only one jump remaining, Springdale Rose came again under the handling of N. Coe, to run Silverskin into submission.

Sunday Ball Test Costs Virginian $5

Richmond, May 9 (AP).—They called one strike on Manager Ed Hendee of the Richmond Colts, today, when he appeared in police court to answer to a charge of laboring at his trade on the Sabbath, a misdemeanor under a half-century-old State law.

Police Justice Elben C. Folkes found the manager guilty and fined him $5, but Hendee noted an appeal. Justice Folkes dismissed charges against other members of the Colts' squad and against three umpires. All were arrested at the end of a game here last Sunday.

The case will be tried in Husting Court and Hendee said he was prepared to carry it to the Supreme Court of Appeals for an authoritative ruling on the legality of Sunday baseball in Virginia.

A similar case is pending in Norfolk, where Piedmont teams also participated in Sunday contests.

County Section Title Won by Thurmont, 24-2

Walkersville, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Thurmont won the pennant in the Northern Division of the Frederick County High School League by defeating Walkersville on the home field in easy fashion, 24 to 2. It was the deciding game and the victory entitles Thurmont to meet the pennant winner of the Southern Division for the championship of the county.

Thurmont clinched the game in the first inning on a single, safe bunt and home run by Clarke. Six more were added in the second on two singles, walk, two doubles, fielder's choice and two triples. The winners set up new league record for hits and runs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCOTCH QUEEN, $2.90, $2.70, $2.50; ZAY, $11.40, $8.40; ALANOVA, $10.10.

SCOTCH QUEEN went to the leaders rapidly soon after the start, swerved repeatedly after taking command, and then had to be stoutly urged to last long enough. ZAY had nice speed from the start, saved ground after meeting with slight interference, and came courageously under severe urging. Bejshak made a claim of foul that was not allowed. ALANOVA raced strongly throughout, and then held on gamely. LOVE LOST, forced to race on the outside, finished with good speed. LA CHERIE showed a good effort. DANCING QUEEN lacked early speed. IWINTOO was shuffled back soon after the break. APPLE FRITTER was outrun. SUN LURE could not reach contention. PAPILLOTE suffered from much crowding, and was badly knocked about.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Trojan. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:44. Off at 2:45. Winner, N. B. Steward's ch. c. (3), by Fair Gain—Foreforn. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANAGER BILL, $9.60, $5.10, $3.60; NOURRICE, $5.20, $4.40; TRIOLET, $8.10.

MANAGER BILL, rated for the first six furlongs, swung to the outside when moving to the leaders, took command entering the home stretch, and then held NOURRICE safe. Latter followed GOLDEN CAMP closely, gained command midway of the final turn, but could not resist the winner. TRIOLET worked her way up gradually, and held on gamely for the final drive. DAWNCHILD, shaken up early in the running, failed to respond at any stage. She raced far below her best form, and can do much better. GOLDEN CAMP began tiring after six furlongs. SECOND STORY swerved to the inside at the start, and crowded her field. OMAR KHY was badly outclassed.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Palmetto Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:08. Off at 3:09. Winner, J. B. Belk's b. m. (5), by Meridian—Lisure. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:49 2-5 (13 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPRINGDALE ROSE, $34.00, $10.10, $3.70; PHILISTION, $7.40, $4.00; GLANEUR, $3.00.

SPRINGDALE ROSE, fencing cleverly, then steadied when displaced at the eleventh fence, regained command after taking the twelfth fence, and then drew out under stout pressure. PHILISTION, kept forwardly placed from the beginning, finished gamely when put to a hard drive. GLANEUR raced strongly from the start. He held on well under severe punishment. INSHORE worked his way up on the inside, and finished full of run. SILVERSKIN assumed the lead at the tenth fence, but tightened out badly in the closing drive. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Pimlico Graded Handicap (class A). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:43½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK HOPE, $13.00, $5.80, $4.10; HALCYON, $4.70, $4.40; KHAMSEEN, $6.40.

DARK HOPE, slow to get going, secured racing room on the inside when moving to the leaders, saved ground when taking command at the stretch turn, and kept under pressure, drew out in the closing furlong. HALCYON improved his position on the outside, closed willingly, but could not threaten the winner. KHAMSEEN displayed nice speed while setting the pace. He tired early and when placed to punishment. FLYING HOUR raced forwardly throughout. CHARACTER weakened after making a bold effort approaching the home stretch. OPEN RANGE weakened gradually. BALIOS raced in dull fashion.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. The Windsor Hills. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:18½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAHOO, $7.70, $3.90, $3.50; LITTLE STOKES, $3.50, $2.50; CHAT EAGLE, $11.70.

WAHOO, away in motion, was rated under steadying restraint in the early stages, took command when ready, and shaken up for the final drive, outstayed LITTLE STOKES. Latter gained fast when put to a drive, and came willingly at the end. CHAT EAGLE saved ground throughout, but weakened when put to a drive. FOLKING raced well up, then tired when he went 3 wide. FIFE had no excuses. ZEMBLA trailed far back and was steered wide for the entire trip.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Pimlico Graded Handicap (class B). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:47. Off at 4:48½. Winner, F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANT REMEMBER, $12.60, $5.90, $4.00; BUBBLESOME, $4.60, $3.40; NED O., $3.80.

CANT REMEMBER moved up on the inside of RED RUN midway of the back stretch, swung to the outside when taking command, and under stout urging, outfinished BUBBLESOME. Latter displayed keen speed in the early stages, was placed to punishment when challenged, and then weakened gradually. He was in tight quarters at the end, and McTaggart made a claim of foul that was not allowed. NED O. worked his way up on the outside, was inclined to bear in during the stretch drive, and held on willingly. MOON GLORY could not better his position. SOLACE was outrun. RED RUN stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:19. Off at 5:20½. Winner, A. Gaignard's ch. f. (3), by Happy Argo—Idleness. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE ALONG, $5.70, $3.60, $2.80; SOURCE CIRCLE, $4.60, $3.90; MODERN TIMES, $4.90.

IDLE ALONG, outrun at the first turn, was rated in front until reaching the home stretch, then drew out nicely under mild urging. SOURCE CIRCLE, in close pursuit of the winner in the last six furlongs, could not menace the pacemaker after being put to a drive. MODERN TIMES, kept in the thick of contention, was easily best of the others. OLD FIELD closed some ground in the last half-mile. POLITEN was unable to threaten at any stage. TRENTONIAN had early speed.

EIGHTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:49. Off at 5:54. Winner, L. Haymaker's b. c. (3), by Broad Side—Wildwood. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIFF, $4.80, $3.00, $2.30; LAZI CANTER, $5.10, $3.00; STEPBROTHER, $3.00.

BIFF, away well, and in close attendance of the leaders while on the inside, took command at his leisure when midway of the turn, opened up a winning lead, and finished with speed in reserve. LAZI CANTER, slower than usual to get going, circled his field, and was racing gamely at the end. STEPBROTHER, in hand early, weakened when put to a drive. FRIAR MARK could not threaten seriously. BARRY went evenly. ALLENFERN had nice speed early, but weakened.

Good Advice Wins Jamaica Feature

Jamaica Race Track, May 9 (AP). Mrs. James Austin's Good Advice, a close second to his stablemate, Mr. Khayyam, in his only previous start this year, was a handy winner of the Rosedale Handicap of 6 furlongs here today. Silvio Coucci guided the Catawba Farm 4-year-old home by a length to round out a triple. Mrs. John Hertz's Pairbypair, making his seasonal bow, gamely headed the Wheatley Stable's filly, Slapdash, for the place. Dunlilt was fourth and last.

Good Advice and Slapdash were equal favorites at 7 to 5. Good Advice, carrying 118 pounds, made the fast time of 1:11¼ and collected $785 for his owner.

Pairbypair ran a splendid race for a first effort this year and he doubtless will show to better advantage with this race under his belt. He dashed to the front and kept a head in front of Good Advice until the final quarter mile. Coucci sent his mount around the pacemaker and took command before entering the stretch.

Stocks Resume Losing Trend; Gains Dwindle

New York, May 9 (AP).—The stock market resumed its decline today, losing most of yesterday's rally.

Trading slackened, and save for a little flurry in the early afternoon, stock was not pressed for sale in important volume, but at the finish losses of 1 to 2 points or more were common. The turnover was only 1,107,140 shares.

Midweek business statistics tended to confirm the opinion in stock market quarters that the spring peak of industrial activity was past.

Electric Power Output.

The weekly electric power production report showed a substantial reduction from the previous week, reflecting in part the first week of daylight saving. Railroad freight reports indicated that the complete report of Class 1 carriers to be issued Friday would show little change from the preceding week.

All in all, the business picture, while indicating continuance of a large volume of activity in the face of the usual seasonal trend, was not sufficiently inspiring to prompt fresh buying of stocks, and selling was resumed as traders concluded that the previous day's upturn was merely a technical rebound.

While the market's rally in the previous session had coincided with announcement of the silver conference at the White House, Wall street's second thoughts after fuller perusal of the silver news were not particularly enthusiastic. Inflationists received little comfort from the vague and somewhat contradictory reports over the silver situation, and silver futures reacted .50 to .83 of a cent. Bar silver for immediate delivery was advanced 1⅛ cents an ounce to 45¼ cents, bringing it into line with the sharp advance in the futures market late yesterday.

Selling Active in Motors.

Selling in the share market was rather active in the motors, and General Motors, Chrysler, Hudson and Nash all got down around a point. Silver shares reacted almost as much as they advanced yesterday, U. S. Smelting lost about 6 points and American Smelting more than 2.

In the rails there was considerable activity in New York Central rights, which expired today. The rights entitled the holder of each 100 shares of stock to buy $1,200 face value of new convertible bonds, convertible into common stock at 40. The stock traded today around 29, and closed a fraction higher. The rights closed at 1½. Rails generally were rather heavy, however, with Santa Fe and Southern Pacific off a point, and Union Pacific down more than 2.

Miscellaneous issues declining 1 to 2 points included American Can, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Case, Loew's, DuPont, National Distillers and U. S. Steel. Spiegel-May-Stern dropped 8½ points in another of its sharp fluctuations.

A bright spot in the day's corporation news was the increase in Eastman's annual dividend rate to $4 from $3. The stock rose more than 2 points, then slid back a fraction.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

For a 25 to 75 Ratio Between Silver and Gold the Treasury Would Have to Spend Some $1,700,000,000 for "New Money."

By Ralph West Robey.

It is not positive, of course, but from the White House statement published in yesterday's papers, there appears to be little room to doubt that "something more is to be done for silver." Just what it will amount to, when it will occur, and why it is to be done are questions that still are to be answered. It would appear that the most likely development on amount is the declaration of a policy of having our metallic base composed 25 per cent of silver and 75 per cent of gold. Perhaps this is somewhat better than the 30 to 70 ratio that was discussed earlier, but the amount of silver involved is so great in either instance that the reduction is insignificant.

With a 25 to 75 ratio the total expenditure for silver, granting the metal now held by the Treasury is valued at $1.29 an ounce, would be $1,700,000,000. This would give us a total metallic base for our monetary system of $10,350,000,000. Of this some $7,750,000,000 would consist of gold and $2,600,000,000 would consist of silver.

Higher Value for Silver Reduces Possible Purchases.

These calculations, it is worth emphasizing, are based upon the assumption that silver is valued at $1.29 an ounce. If the metal is given a higher value, the size of the metallic base will be the same, but both the number of ounces and the amount of expenditure by the Government will be less. This point is important because the President has the power to devalue the "silver content" of the dollar just as he did the gold content of the dollar.

If he did this, and did it before purchasing the new silver, the total expenditure would be reduced by some $600,000,000, or to $1,100,000,000. In other words, we now have in our monetary system 690,000,000 ounces of silver. At $1.29 an ounce this is worth $890,000,000. If the "statutory" price of silver were increased by the same proportion as gold was, each ounce would be worth $2.18. The present Treasury holding, thus, would be worth $1,500,000,000, leaving only $1,100,000,000 to be added in order to get the 25 to 75 ratio.

Devaluation Would Give Total of Over 4 Billion.

Suppose, however, and this is the possibility that intrigues me especially, the devalution comes after the total purchases have been made. In order to have a 25 to 75 ratio with silver valued at $1.29 an ounce we must have just a little over 2,000,000,000 ounces of silver. If this, then, were revalued at $2.18 an ounce the aggregate value would be $4,360,000,000—a net increase over the value of the present holding of silver of $3,470,000,000.

That we should have any such juggling in our monetary system seems incredible. It would be no more than the silver lobby would have the President do, however, if it could get its way. It is this that makes the apparent current compromise so frightening. In other words, "doing something for silver" means feeding a group whose appetite is insatiable—a group that unless resisted will continue to pull funds out of the United States Treasury just as long as there are any funds left.

Goods Markets.

New York, May 9 (A.P.).—Print cloths are held very firmly, some houses quoting 3¼ cents for 38½-inch 64 x 60s. Inquiries are more active. Curtailment of production, amounting to 35 per cent over a period of 90 days, is being planned. Rayon sales are light and the markets firm. Silk goods moved steadily at firmer prices. Moderate sales of wool sports suitings are being made. Burlaps are firm on reports of moderate April shipments from Calcutta.

Bond Market Is Irregular; Federals Fall

New York, May 9 (AP).—Mild irregularities again crept into the bond market today and even listed U. S. Government securities were not free from minor declines which were attributed to profit taking.

Total transfers of $12,815,000, par value, compared with $12,015,000 yesterday,

Wheat's Gains Canceled by Profit Sales

Crop Damages Still Aid in Price Advances; Other Grains Off.

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Sensationally aggravated drought whirled wheat up today 9¼ cents above last week's low, but big profit-taking sales led later to small net losses.

Dust storms were reported over wide areas both in American and Canadian wheat territory, with no moisture of consequence anywhere, and the official forecast pointing to likelihood of rainless skies ahead.

Temperatures, however, promised to be lower and frost was looked for in Nebraska and South Dakota tonight.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat closed nervous, ¼ to ½ cent under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅜ to ¾ down, oats, ⅜ to ¾ off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2 cents.

Upturns in wheat prices today were without relation to a statement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace suggesting that United States 1934 production of wheat might total as low as 450,000,000 bushels, as against a normal crop of more than 800,000,000.

This statement was not issued until long after today's trading had ended. However, the gravity of adverse crop conditions formed the dominating influence in the wheat pit the greater part of the day.

Damage in Nebraska.

Particular attention of wheat bulls was given to advices from Nebraska that in many places crops had suffered irreparable damage and that drought had been the most severe since the turn of the century. Official reports, too, were at hand that in western Kansas much wheat was injured beyond recovery.

One leading private expert summarizing drought conditions elsewhere said the outlook suggested further rapid crop deterioration. Moves at Washington looking to legislative steps for nationalization of silver acted meanwhile at times as a contributing bullish factor, though decidedly less so than was the case the previous day.

Corn and oats mainly reflected the action of wheat. Much notice was taken of trade reports indicating that Iowa, the banner corn State, was facing possibility of a shortage of corn for feeding, a situation attributed to oversealing to obtain Government loans.

Provisions were responsive to firmness of hog values.

Revised Duty List Decreed by Poland

Following the expiration on April 30, 1934, of the list of numerous agricultural and industrial products on which reduced import duties or duty exemptions had been established semiannually for several years past, a new list of duty reductions or exemptions was decreed by the Polish government on April 25, to be effective from May 1 until October 29, 1934, according to cablegrams received in the Department of Commerce from acting Commercial Attache George R. Canty, Warsaw.

The new list comprises products enumerated under over 200 tariff items and among other things includes condensed grape juice, disodium phosphates, soot, drawing charcoal, celluloid, patent and kid leather, steel tape, garden and agricultural implements, machinery, electric locomotives, tractors, river boats, sound film negatives and newsreels.

March Air Passengers Decrease to 22,045

Scheduled air lines operating in continental United States carried 22,045 passengers in March, 1934, according to reports from 21 of the 22 companies operating during that month, the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce announced yesterday.

These scheduled airlines flew 2,372,666 miles, carried 134,975 pounds of express, and flew 8,584,510 passenger miles during March. (A passenger mile is the equivalent of 1 passenger flown 1 mile.)

Comparisons with January and February, 1934, are shown in the following:

Iron and Steel Production of Germany Rises

United Kingdom Registers Sharp Output Gain in March.

German iron and steel production continued to rise in March, according to a report from Vice Consul James H. Wright, Cologne.

Iron production during the month amounted to 650,389 metric tons, compared with 426,171 tons in the corresponding month of 1933 and 549,962 tons during February, 1934.

While the increase in total production for the month of March was considerable, the average daily output during March as compared with February showed an increase of only 6.8 per cent.

52.6 Per Cent Gain.

Total production as compared with February, 1934, increased by 18.2 per cent, and by 52.6 per cent, as compared with March, 1933. Average daily production on a 31 working day basis during March, 1934, amounted to 20,980 metric tons, as compared with 13,737 tons during March, 1933, and 19,642 tons during February, 1934, on a 28 working day basis.

German steel production during March, 1934, stood at 929,662 metric tons, as compared with 587,220 tons during March, 1933, and 823,269 tons during February, 1934. Average daily production during March, 1934, as compared with February increased by 4.2 per cent, while the increase as compared with March, 1933, amounted to 64.4 per cent.

Average daily steel production during March, 1934, amounted to 35,756 metric tons on a 26 working day basis, as compared with 21,749 metric tons during March, 1933, and 34,383 tons during February, 1934, on a 24 working day basis.

Blast Furnaces Increase.

German blast furnaces in operation increased from 50 furnaces in February to 62 in March, the report shows.

Exports of iron and steel products from the United Kingdom registered a sharp upward turn in March, according to a report received in the Commerce Department's Iron and Steel Division.

Total foreign shipments during the month amounted to 171,469 tons, an increase of 29,477 tons over the preceding month and 16,469 gross tons over March, 1933. Fourteen classes of products contributed to the increased trade in March, the more outstanding being tin plate, plates, cast iron pipe and pig iron. The only decline of importance was recorded in exports of wrought pipe.

British import trade in March in iron and steel products declined to 121,555 gross tons, a loss of 1,716 tons as compared with February but an increase of 24,692 tons over March, 1933.

An upward trend was evident in the case of all products while six products showed declines. Leading gains were those in steel bars, plates, wire nails, and structural steel, while the outstanding decreases occurred in hoops and ingots.

Imports of iron and steel products into the United Kingdom during the first quarter of 1934 totaled 364,646 gross tons compared with receipts during the corresponding period of 1933 of 181,864 tons.

Exports of such products during the first three months of 1934 amounted to 477,156 gross tons against 439,252 tons in the 1933 period.

Scrap Steel Prices Recede; Autos Slow Up

New York, May 9 (AP).—While steel production has risen two points this week to 60 per cent of capacity, the highest rate since September, 1930, scrap prices continue to recede and automobile production "has apparently passed its peak," said Iron Age today.

As to the automobile situation, the review said the changed outlook "is ascribed to a combination of causes, not the least of which is the series of labor disturbances which harassed manufacturers at the height of their sales campaign."

"The continued rise in steel output in the face of a leveling off of motor car production," said the review, "is accounted for in part by the desire of consumers to take advantage of contracts made prior to recent price advances.

"However, most of the stocking that has taken place so far has been on the part of mills. Nonintegrated producers have accumulated large supplies of semifinished steel, and pipe, tube and wire mills have built up stocks in warehouse for shipment next month."

Scrap prices, the review pointed out, "have suffered because of the determination of steel producers to liquidate their scrap inventories by July 1."

Aside from business done on a quarterly basis, said the publication, the industry has considerable railroad and structural tonnage which will carry well into July and August.

Steel Ingot Production Highest Since July, '33

New York, May 9 (AP).—Steel ingot production in the United States in April was the highest of any month since July, 1933, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

April output was given as 2,935,631 tons, comparing with 1,362,856 tons in April, 1933.

Budd Wheel Sales Gain 312 Per Cent This Year

New York, May 9.—An increase of 312 per cent in sales in the first four months of this year, compared with the corresponding period of last year, was announced today by the Budd Wheel Co.

April sales alone were 34 per cent greater than the total sales in the first four months of last year.

Radio Waves and Ripples

MEMO to Mr. Adams:

This half of the radio department has been away four days (and nights) and such carryings-on behind our back we have never seen. Wasn't a microphone glimpse of that armful of touring C. B. S. talent—George Hall, Tony Wons, Tito Guizar et al.—enough for you? Was it necessary for you to depart bed early enough in the morning to catch Arthur Godfrey at his daily stint? See what a spot you've put us in. If our bosses don't get the idea that we, too, should be up with the dawn and off through deserted streets and the din of singing birds, bound for the nearest radio station, the studio bosses are certain to. There are two other stations in town with sunrise programs, and you know how quickly people talk of favoritism.

"Well, George did," they'll say to us.

And where, we ask you, will we be? Sonorously in our bed, you can bet, but just the same the whole thing is going to be mighty embarrassing. And if you wouldn't give more than a couple of Godfrey's dearie me's for our predicament, think of yourself as likely to bring discomfiture if not impairment of health to everyone writing radio in town. Getting up with the birds can become a habit. You should know.

There's another thing to be considered. Supposing all early risers get the notion that seeing broadcasts is much more fun than listening to them—Heaven knows, your scrivening makes them attractive enough—and troop down to the station each morning. Where would Godfrey and his clients be? Where, in fact, would radio be?

When Floyd Gibbons, jabbering radio newsman, returns to the air for his old sponsor Saturday, his time will be shared by none other than Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Gibbons broadcasting is being paid for by a manufacturer of roofing materials.

Mrs. Roosevelt's part in the program will be a speech entitled "The American Home."

Not for any selfish consideration is Mrs. Roosevelt departing from White House custom to associate herself with a commercial broadcast. She's doing it for one of her favorite charities, the American Friends Service Association.

SOMEHOW or other George Hall, the C. B. S. bandman, got the idea that Tito Guizar and all the rest of the radio troupe now current on the stage at the Fox needed a little practice in direct audience contact, and for that reason, if for no other, touring vaudeville boards would be a good thing for all of them.

He told this department as much at breakfast one morning this week and, as soon as possible thereafter, it rushed his words into the composing room. It seems, Mr. Hall, we overlooked Mrs. Guizar, Mr. Guizar's very devoted wife. This from her letter this morning should give you an idea of what we mean:

"May I say to you, sir, and to Mr. Hall through you, that Tito Guizar's personal appearance at Loew's Fox this week as a member of the Columbia Broadcasting radio stars is not by any means his 'first practical contact with audiences.' Tito Guizar's theatrical career began when in his 'teens' he was sent to Italy . . . appearing, after several years of study, for the first time in public . . . as the second tenor in the opera 'Cavalleria Rusticana.'

"After his return to America he appeared for several seasons in Mexico's National Opera Theater, and in all the big opera and operetta houses in Cuba, Santo Domingo, Venezuela, San Salvador, Colombia, Brazil, Chile and Argentina . . . and for over three years now he has been appearing in vaudeville constantly.

"I don't know about the other artists in the unit to which Mr. Hall also belongs, but I can say about my husband that he is not a beginner . . . much as I admire Mr. Hall's artistry, I resent his 'psychology.'"

She'sh on to you, Hall.

Final returns in the Poodlescatstown Club election as announced by WRC's Aunt Sue yesterday were:

Pep, president, with a total of 515 votes; Pink Eye, secretary, on the strength of his 500 votes; Brown Doggie, vice president, and Muley Wuley, treasurer. Cinnamon Bear tied for fourth place, Aunt Sue tells us, but was perfectly willing to step aside for Muley, inasmuch as he served as president last year.

Aunt Sue also would like us to say that Bita Gita absolutely was not elected to membership. There had been some controversy about that, it seems.

This pretty face belongs to Ruth Robin, who also is the possessor of a voice of a pleasing, deep-throated quality, carried on Columbia with Charles Barnet's orchestra.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The great business district of New Orleans is built up on thousands and thousands of huge creosoted pine pilings which are driven down into Mississippi River silt and gumbo mud to a depth which equals the height of an 8 or 10-story office building. Sometimes at a depth of about 100 feet below the ground, builders encounter hard pan, but no effort is made to drive the pilings through this formation.

It is the friction of the thousands of pilings against the relatively soft material through which they are driven that supports the great loads imposed upon them. Alluvial soil which in itself would offer inadequate support for huge buildings is rendered perfectly satisfactory by the wooden stakes driven into it. The buildings and their substructures virtually float in the supporting ground.

Strange as it seems, the remains of age old forests of cypress are often found in building excavations. When the excavations for the 24-story American Bank building were being made, engineers found 12 feet of surface silt deposited by the Mississippi. Under this they encountered a layer of cypress stumps, some of which were 12 feet in diameter. Below the cypress stumps was a layer of blue gumbo mud, representing vegetable decay, and under this mud was another layer of Mississippi silt. Sometimes a second layer of cypress stumps is found.

Jocko Catches Turtle as Big as Hee-Haw

Jocko made a lot of fun of Grandpa Bear for letting a little thing like a turtle pull him into the water that day, and you remember how he laughed at Blackie when his pole broke because Mr. Big Fish jerked it so hard and Blackie fell over backward into the water. Well, Blackie always wanted to get even with Jocko for that laugh, and he wanted to get even some more for eating all his fishes that day while Blackie was taking a nap down near Jocko's house.

Blackie thought this would be a good time to have a little fun out of Jocko, and so while the others were fixing the hooks Blackie went out in the garden and had a talk with Benny and Jenny, who were catching grasshoppers and butterflies.

I don't know whether I ever told you about it, but ever since they were teeny-weeny babies Benny and Jenny had been running away and going swimming down in the pond, and they had learned to dive and swim under the water a long time without coming up. Blackie had heard about this from his wife, and now he told the cubs what he wanted them to do.

Cubs Sneak Away.

Before the others went down to the pond the cubs sneaked away and swam out a little way from the shore where there were some stumps and a bunch of little trees in the water. They carried a long stick with them, for they knew they would need it. There were two big stumps that came up just above the water, and they were covered with bushes and little trees, so that nobody on the shore could see anything but the trees, and Benny and Jenny sat on the stump and waited.

Pretty soon Blackie and the others came down to the pond and Grandpa caught a tiny toad frog and baited Jocko's hook. Jocko said he wanted to do the fishing for the turtle, and Blackie was mighty willing to let him do it. After fishing a while without getting a bite, Blackie told Jocko that he thought turtles lived mostly around stumps and trees that stood in the water, and if Jocko would throw his hook over near the little clump of trees maybe he would get a bite.

So Jocko threw his hook over there, and sure enough, it wasn't a minute before something grabbed his hook and went pulling away mighty fast. Jocko let out his line as far as it would go, and then he wrapped the end around his hand and pulled hard, but his pulling didn't do any good. His hook kept right on going, and now it had pulled Jocko into the water up to his knees, and now up to his neck, and now he was swimming with one hand and the fish line was pulling the other. Jocko was doing the fastest swimming he ever did in his life, and he hollered to Blackie to get the boat and come and pull the turtle out. He couldn't look back and see the smile on Blackie's face. If he had, he would have thought something was wrong.

Jocko Calls for Help.

Of course, the cubs were under the water, where they had put a stick on Jocko's hook, and each one had an end of the stick in his mouth and were swimming so fast they had Jocko scooting along on the water like a sailboat. Jocko kept calling for help, and the cubs kept swimming till they got away out in the middle of the pond. Then Benny saw a little fish about as big as your hand, and he grabbed him and stuck him on the hook, and then he and Jenny turned the stick loose, and swam down to the other side of the pond.

When the children turned the hook loose, Jocko felt it pulling easier, and so he began swimming back toward the crowd on the shore. He thought he had just tired the turtle out, so he couldn't pull any more, as he shouted to Blackie: "I've got him, and I'll bet he's as big as Hee-Haw."

Hee-Haw, Hound Dog, and everybody else had come down to see the fun. Jocko didn't have any more trouble in swimming to the shore, and when he got out he began winding up his line, and telling everybody to get out of the way so the big turtle would have plenty of room.

And now the line was wound most up, and here came the hook with a little old fish on it!

"A turtle as big as Hee-Haw, is it?" Hee-Haw yelled. And then everybody but Jocko Monkey helped Hee-Haw laugh most loud enough to be heard at Mr. Man's house.

BUICK 1931 De Luxe Sedan, model "87" straight 8. This handsome car embodies all of Buick's distinctive features, enduring beauty and rugged, hard-to-beat quality. Its valve-in-head 8-cylinder engine produces 104 horsepower with silent smoothness and you can drive this car all day at high speed without fatigue and without fear of injuring the engine. It is equipped with hydraulic shock absorbers, synchro-mesh transmission, oil filter, oil temperature regulator and other late modern features that contribute to long engine life and riding comfort. This car has been inspected by Buick specialists and found to be absolutely perfect. The body, finished in glistening black, has just been simonized; all chrome parts shine like new, and the mohair interior is color-true and spotless. Has 6 wire wheels. 2 mounted forward with metal tire covers; trunk on rear; electric clock, dual windshield wipers, and other extras. Bring a mechanic to check it over with you to check the condition of this car. He will tell you this Buick, which sold new for more than $1,700, is a real buy and greatly underpriced at..... $595

Clean Records Will Confront Sales Confabs

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

This week, Fox Films' 1933-34 production schedule will be completed.

This is the consummation of the year's work to which production executives eagerly look forward as the spring of the year draws on into summer, in order that their whole time and effort may be concentrated on the draft of the next year's plans to be submitted to the company sales conventions that will begin to tumble over each other on both coasts in the course of a month or two.

The last of this season's Fox group currently before the cameras include Jesse L. Lasky's "Grand Canary," with Warner Baxter; "Baby Take a Bow," with Shirley Temple, the 4-year-old who scored so emphatically in "Stand Up and Cheer," Claire Trevor and Jimmy Dunn; "Charlie Chan's Courage," with Warner Oland; "Wanted," with Hugh Williams and Rosemary Ames, and "She Was a Lady," with Helen Twelvetrees.

Four in Cutting Room.

Four other productions are being edited for immediate release. These include "Call It Luck," with Herbert Mundin and "Pat" Paterson; "Change of Heart," the new Gaynor-Farrell joint vehicle; "Handy Andy," with Will Rogers and Peggy Wood, and "Springtime for Henry," with Otto Kruger and Nancy Carroll.

It is significant of the vast artistic and mechanical advancement that has been made in the business of turning out celluloid entertainment that nowadays when a company announces a year's schedule of pictures, that schedule is put on the market practically without omission or substitution.

In the earlier days of the industry that was not true. Back in the old silent days elaborate schedules were made up in advance of the production season and then all the exhibitor had to do was try and find some of the pictures which he had contracted to buy and run.

It was a "game" then; it is a well organized and efficient business now—some say it is an art. They may not be so far wrong.

The mystery is solved concerning the missing principals from the burlesque offering now being presented at Old Col. Jimmie Lake's Gayety Theater.

It may be recalled that Mr. Whitney's Monday review recited the absence from the cast of Jean Williams, soubret; Margie White, ingenue, and Jean Rose, prima donna. This trio finally was reported in the Havre de Grace Hospital, in Havre de Grace, Md., only a few miles from the scene of an automobile accident in which all three were seriously injured.

Jean Williams suffered a broken jaw, Margie White a sprained ankle and Jean Rose a broken nose.

The accident is said by witnesses to have been unavoidable, no blame attaching to the driver of the car. Miss White's ankle was sufficiently recovered to permit her discharge from the hospital yesterday and Bob Hurley, one of this department's reliable scouts, reported her kicking the gong around the Gayety last night—with the other foot!

Broken jaws and noses, however, are something else again.

A Baer in the Hall!

The Pierce Hall Players announce the presentation of "Rhapsody in Blah," a new play, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, June 28 and 29.

The scene of the play is laid in Washington and the action concerns the conduct of a Representative in Congress from the West, who is caught in a reform movement, while his son becomes a man-about-town—in the more ominous sense of the term. The play requires a cast of 17 and is a keen political satire written from a broad comedy point of view.

Of Fourth Estate.

Frank L. Baer, well-known Washington newspaper man, is the author of the play. He will personally direct its production.

Mr. Baer has been a familiar figure in Capital journalism almost continuously since 1922, first as a member of the editorial staff of The Post and later with an afternoon paper. During two years of this period he was publicity director for the old B. F. Keith Theater, which went the way of all vaudeville in the Radio-Keith-Orpheum merger.

There will be many weather eyes cocked on Master Baer's new play when it is put on in Pierce Hall next month. Two of them are watching this as I write it.

After having been tried out at several matinee performances, a new routine has been introduced into the Shubert edition of the "Ziegfeld Follies," current at the Winter Garden in New York by Cherry and June Preisser, eccentric dancers. The new dance, one of the most unusual ever seen on any stage, utilizes a unique contrapuntal rhythm. While Cherry Preisser is executing a precision tap routine, June goes through a series of acrobatic stunts which are rhythmically synchronized with the tap dance.

In case you do not immediately identify the Preisser kids, they are the high-voltage New Orleans pepperboxes last seen here on the stage of Loew's Fox as featured performers in Kate Smith's Revue, just prior to their joining the "Follies."

June is the only youngster I can think of who might possibly be coached to take the late lamented Lillian Leitzel's place with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Hey, Rube!

I quote a paragraph from a recent letter reaching this desk over the signature of Miss Isabelle M. Parks, Heaven's gift to the dramatic departments when news runs low:

"By the way, will you please give us some intelligent information about this here now circus that is coming to town shortly? I saw a brief notice somewhere, but it didn't even mention Clyde Beatty and his lovely kittens. The scenario of the drama is that I am simply dying to see those gorgeous tigers and lions in action, but if I go and Beatty isn't there, I shall certainly burn up. My ignorance on the subject is profound, so please give a little space in your column to this impending event."

And this, dear lady, we are now prepared to do, having sat around for an hour or so today with Mr. Frank Braden, gentleman, scholar, bon vivant and, among various other things, avant courier of the big tops, due here on the Camp Meigs grounds a week from today.

The Bad News.

Pained as we are to break the news, Clyde Beatty and his lovely kittens this season have been transferred to the Hagenbeck-Wallace Show, wintering in Peru, Ind., and now playing out of Chicago, and won't be here until July.

As long as we are at it, the sad news might as well be made complete. Neither will Alfredo Codona, most graceful of all aerialists, be seen with the "Big Show" this season, or any other, if all I hear is true. Alfredo injured a shoulder in a fall into a net in such fashion that it is feared it never will mend properly and so keep him on the ground for the rest of his life.

However, there are a million and one things that ARE with the show this season and they will all be on view at Camp Meigs in a week.

Original character sketches, written and acted in costume by Rebecca Tarwater, will be presented by this gifted young dramatic artiste on Friday evening of this week at 8 o'clock, in the studio of the King-Smith Studio-School. Mr. and Mrs. August King-Smith have sent out invitations for this first of Miss Tarwater's local recitals in her own miniature dramas.

A native of Tennessee, Rebecca Tarwater has created some roles of Tennessee mountain folk whom she impersonates in a group of mountain songs. She also gives several characters in an amusing sketch she calls "The Wives of Henry Cates," which may or may not be a play on words aimed at our Tudor friend, the regal English Henry. Miss Tarwater has been a member of a Little Theater group and has studied voice with Oscar Seagle.

London Laughs!

That indefatigable globe-trotter, Mr. Maynard Owen Williams, of the National Geographic Society's far-flung hosts, sends along from London a program of Jack Buchanan's musical production of "Mr. Whittington," one of the British capital's current hits, in which Elsie Randolph plays the feminine lead opposite Mr. Buchanan.

The program, printed in white on red and legible in the dark, is entertaining in itself, but not so much so as one or two of Mr. Williams' illuminating comments on the goings-on, to wit:

"Elsie Randolph is to use a green lipstick tomorrow because she is going out with a traffic cop!"

"In a hesitation number, an Hawaiian guitar in the orchestra holds the drag 'til the next note."

"'Female hound whose union has been blessed' is Jack Buchanan's definition of 'dogma.'"

"AND THE CROWD ROARS."

On-to-Victory Note.

I hope the crowd caught them!

Cumberland Picks Depositories.

Cumberland, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The mayor and city council passed an order designating the First National Bank and the Second National Bank as city depositories.

Two Ominous Cinema Gentlemen

On the left will be recognized Master George Raft, all done up as a bullfighter, as he appears in his new picture, "The Trumpet Blows," opening at Loew's Fox Theater on Friday. Facing him is another young fellow of blood and iron, Boris Karloff by name. Karloff will be seen on the Rialto screen tomorrow opposite Bela Lugosi—and what a pair that is!—in Universal's production of "The Black Cat."

Holter Indorsed For Postmaster

Middletown Official Is Asked to Resign.

Frederick, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—The Democatic State committee meeting here today recommended Charles R. Holter for postmaster at Middletown to succeed Leslie G. Gaver, Republican, removed by the Postoffice Department for political activity. Mr. Gaver, who is a candidate for register of wills on the Republican ticket this fall, was asked several days ago to resign.

William J. Grove, chairman, announced that David J. Lewis requested a recommendation to fill the unexpired term of Gaver which ends in December. The Democratic organization of Middletown had previously recommended Mr. Holter.

David C. Winebrenner 3d, Secretary of State, recognized party leader, and William J. Grove, chairman of the State commtitee, said they were unaware that Mr. Gaver had been asked to resign until word was received from Representative Lewis to recommend a successor.

$2,422 Raised In Welfare Drive

Children's Aid Society in Carroll Reports.

Westminster, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Miss Bonnie M. Custenborder, director of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society, announced yesterday that final reports from the various districts showed a total of $2,422.16 had been raised in the drive for funds launched by the welfare organization April 2.

Although several of the districts, including Mount Airy, Freedom and Precinct No. 1, Uniontown, exceeded their quotas, total contributions were more than $1,000 under the $3,500 the society helped to raise.

Contributions reported by the various districts are: Taneytown, $108.75; Uniontown, $147.41; Myers, $48.30; Woolerys, $99.97; Freedom, $206.95; Manchester, $190.50; Westminster, $757.51; Hampstead, $79.55; Franklin, $34.25; Middleburg, $33.50; New Windsor, $154.66; Union Bridge, $130.15; Mount Airy, $319.25; Berrett, $109.41.

Autoist Fined $125 For Fatal Accident

Action Follows Death of Baltimore Physician.

Baltimore, May 9 (Spl.).—Fines totaling $125 were levied against George J. Mohr, 74, in traffic court here today on charges involving an automobile accident in which a young Baltimore physician was killed.

Y.M.C.A. Opens Fair Today at Waynesboro

Waynesboro, Pa., May 9 (Spl.).—The sixth annual Waynesboro Y. M. C. A. Community Fair will open tomorrow for three days.

The fair will raise money for physical department activities and support of the Y. M. C. A. camp at Old Forge near here. In addition to the exhibits, a band concert is held nightly in front of the building.
